Powers Yield To Italy on Spain; Il Duce Balks Revolt

Britain, France to Give Problem to Discredited Intervention Body.

Reprisals Delayed Pending Hearing

Mussolini Wins Time on 'Volunteer' Issue; 9 Plotters Jailed.

The European Situation.

2 Powers Yield.

By the United Press.

London, Oct. 13.—Great Britain and France, fearful of embarking upon reprisals that might lead to war, late today capitulated to Premier Mussolini and turned the Spanish "volunteer" problem over to the London nonintervention committee.

They said, however, that if nothing satisfactory can be worked out by the committee in two weeks, France and Britain will be prepared to take independent action.

The British cabinet, in a two and one-half hours session, ordered Lord Plymouth, chairman of the nearly collapsed nonintervention committee of 27 nations, to call an emergency session.

The French government, simultaneously discussing military consequences of Mussolini's attitude in a ministerial conference, agreed to delay any outright reprisals until Mussolini is given the last chance to collaborate.

Time Limit Set.

An official spokesman for Britain and France said:

"If the negotiations (in the nonintervention committee) do not produce satisfactory results within a reasonable time it will become necessary to recognize other measures. The time limit for these results will be a fortnight. The present state of affairs can not be expected to continue."

Sources close to the British cabinet said it was decided that if Mussolini refuses to co-operate in giving the Spanish war "back to the Spaniards" by withdrawing his thousands of Black Shirts from the Spanish mainland and the Balearic Islands, swift Anglo-French retaliation will follow.

Will Meet Saturday.

Mussolini, in a formal answer last Saturday to a British-French invitation for a tri-power conference on volunteers, defiantly rejected the idea and said the non-intervention committee was the only body qualified to deal with the subject. He also demanded that his ally, Nazi Germany, which is a nonintervention signatory, be included in any negotiations.

The nonintervention body, torn by dissension since its organization, was expected to meet Saturday.

Responsible diplomats of France and Britain admitted that there was little likelihood of a solution from the neutrality committee—largely because of the presence of Russia, bitter enemy of the Nazi-Fascist bloc—but pointed out that any delay in the darkening crisis would be helpful.

"America Speaks" On the SEC

Is the SEC unpopular with the rank and file of investors? Do they think it has helped them or hurt them?

The American Institute of Public Opinion is now conducting a nation-wide survey among persons who actually own stocks and bonds to determine their attitude toward Federal regulation. The results will show whether the SEC has successfully sold itself to the investing public.

Their reply will appear in the American Institute of Public Opinion poll Sunday, exclusively in The Post.

Japanese Take To Air as Fifth Offense Stalls

Railways and Flying Fields Wrecked; U. S. Sailor Is Wounded.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Oct. 14.—Japanese war planes ranged over the interior of China today, smashing railway lines, bottling up Chinese detachments and destroying military air depots from Canton in the far south to Suiyuan in the north.

On the Shanghai front, too, the attack was shifted to the air, with aerial bombardments over a 20-mile front, as the Japanese fifth general offensive was bogged down by mud and Chinese courage.

Chinese retreat along the Suiyuan Railway in the north reportedly was cut off by a bombing raid that destroyed military highways near Taiyuanfu, the capital of Shansi.

Chinese reports said Japanese planes had bombed the Bocco Tigris forts near Canton, and destroyed the Canton-Hankow railroad bridge at Pakonghow, paralyzing rail traffic.

Other planes flew over the Hangchow Railway station, about 100 miles below Shanghai, killing or wounding a dozen workers.

U. S. Sailor Wounded.

Shanghai (Thursday), Oct. 14 (U.P.). An American sailor was wounded today when a shrapnel fragment struck the U. S. S. Augusta during a Japanese bombardment.

He was Jackson Prugh McMichael, New Orleans, radioman second class. The wound was slight.

Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell immediately protested to Japanese authorities. A Japanese naval spokesman expressed deep regret at the incident.

Appeal for Peace.

Peiping, Oct. 13 (A.P.).—The Japanese-controlled Peiping Peace Preservation Committee tonight published an appeal to China and Japan to cease fighting and commence peace negotiations.

Neutral observers attached much significance to the statement. Chinese expressed the opinion that Japan believes she has shattered Chinese resistance in North China and now wishes to find an excuse for stopping her costly war machine.

Episcopalians Ask Union With Presbyterians

Agreement on Doctrine Is Viewed as Step Toward Physical Merger.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Oct. 13.—The Protestant Episcopal Church asked the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. tonight to join with it in steps to achieve organic union.

The church, through its triennial general convention, authorized a commission to confer with representatives of the Presbyterian Church on the draft of a concordat.

While prospects of physical union in the near future are considered doubtful, proponents of unity hope for an early agreement on fundamental principles of doctrine which might lead eventually to fulfillment of Christ's prayer "That they all may be one."

Another step toward achievement of the long-sought goal of many theologians for one world faith was taken when the convention indorsed the proposed world council of churches and agreed to send delegates to a preliminary conference in Holland, May 9, 1938.

Earlier, the house of deputies, yielding slightly to demands for deletion of "Protestant" from the denomination's title, voted today to make an exception for the Philippine Islands' missionary district.

Islands District Exception

The Islands district, which led the opposition to the present title, will become known as the Philippine Episcopal Church if the House of Bishops in the current general convention concurs in the deputies' action. The district contended deletion of "protestant" would promote church unity. Its representatives also said the word was misunderstood.

The House of Bishops, after receiving three nominations for presiding bishops, postponed the election to Friday. Those nominated to succeed the Right Rev. James De Wolf Perry of Rhode Island, the present presiding bishop, are: Bishop Perry, the Right Rev. William Bertrand Stevens, Bishop of Los Angeles, and the Right Rev. William George McDowell, Bishop of Alabama.

Matron Balks Attempt of U. S. To Remove Lafayette Cannon

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Watervliet, N. Y., Oct. 13.—Mrs. Sarah Hollis Keenan, Watervliet historian, stood in the front ranks of the burgher defenders of an ancient cannon today and with a deft reference to her history books turned back the United States Government's assault on the gun which Gen. Lafayette captured from the British at Yorktown in 1781.

Mrs. Keenan claims that Brig. Gen. Peter Gansevoort, of Albany, was presented the cannon by none other than the Marquis de Lafayette right after the Yorktown surrender and on the basis of her findings Mayor James Donlon tonight asked time for examination of "legal questions."

Chief casualty of Mrs. Keenan's history study was B. Floyd Flickinger, who set out today to disarm, if possible, this community of the cannon which it prizes above the Government's desire to move the piece down to Colonial National Historical Park, which the Interior Department is developing as an historic shrine. Flickinger is the park superintendent.

He strode into a conference today with Mayor Donlon, Representative T. Byrne and Col. Stewart, of the Watervliet Arsenal, with instructions from his Washington chief to adopt conciliatory tactics.

"It's just a little misunderstanding," said the chief. "I am sure Mr. Flickinger will convince them that the cannon can be shown off to better advantage at Yorktown."

But Flickinger and the chief in Washington counted not on the esoteric Mrs. Keenan, whose discovery definitely bolstered the morale of the Watervliet defenders.

Nazis Pledge 'Protection' To Belgians

New Treaty Neutralizes Border; Hitler Talks With Duce First.

Germany Retains Right to Act if Invasion Is Threatened.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Oct. 13.—Germany pledged today to respect the inviolability and integrity of Belgium and, "like the British and French," to assist her in case of attack or invasion.

It was understood Premier Mussolini of Italy was informed in advance of the German move.

By this step, Germany neutralized one important sector of her western boundary. Danger of immediate invasion of the Ruhr Valley in the event of war with western powers was believed greatly reduced. Germany's heavy industries, including the Krupp munition works, are located in the area.

Official comment stressed that "Germany would regain freedom of action if, for example, on the basis of Belgium's membership in the League, the Belgium government were ready to place Belgian territory at the disposal of enemy troops for marching through or as bases of operations."

The declaration was not binding in case "Belgium should co-operate in any warlike operations against Germany."

Speed Is Object.

Germany's pledge was made in a note signed by Foreign Minister Baron Konstantin von Neurath. It said that the Reich wished to define the German attitude toward her western neighbor because a new agreement replacing the Locarno Security Pact might take a long time.

Semiofficially it was acknowledged as a corollary to the Franco-British declaration of April 24, which absolved Belgium of her Locarno Treaty obligation to fight for Great Britain or France if either became the victim of aggression.

The Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung described the new German stand as an answer to President Roosevelt's call for peace.

"After the recent demonstration . . . where Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini pledged themselves to safeguard European peace we heard President Roosevelt's call to peace," the newspaper said.

"The best answer to some of his erroneous conceptions has been given by this positive contribution of Germany to peace."

Belgium Gives Thanks.

Although the guarantee was unilateral—not binding upon Belgium—inspired comment indicated detailed negotiations with Belgium preceded the announcement. The fact that a Belgian note of thanks was published simultaneously with it was regarded by diplomatic observers as virtually giving the German and Belgian exchange the effectiveness of a pact.

The text of the German note:

"In the name of the German government I have the honor to in-

Punctuation Goes Free in Telegrams After Tomorrow

People who put "stops" in their telegrams after tomorrow are just being contrary, old-fashioned and extravagant.

The two companies have gone new-fangled and will provide free punctuation marks to take their places, and the smart English student can go to town with as fancy punctuation as he chooses.

There will be commas, periods, colons, semi-colons, dashes, hyphens, quotation marks, parenthesis, question marks, and apostrophes—all to be used free and freely.

(People who go in for exclamation marks, asterisks, and brackets probably would write, anyway!)

What is more, the person who is concerned about the balanced look of his telegram can ask for paragraphs and get them right where he wants them, and at no extra cost.

A tariff setting forth these changes was filed yesterday with the Federal Communications Commission. R. B. Allen, local Western Union superintendent, said it was done to make the public more fluent, more free, and "easier" in use of the telegraph.

News of the change spread rapidly yesterday and with it went the rumor that "love" also could travel the wires free, after tomorrow. This, however comma the companies denied with gusto.

And thus another landmark passes, a victim of the electrical age—exclamation mark, STOP period.

Roosevelt Lauds Fight For Liberty

Bill of Rights Worthy Cause in 1787 and Now, He Says.

Visits His Poughkeepsie Neighbors and Lays Cornerstone.

Text of President Roosevelt's Address—Page 9.

By the Associated Press.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Oct. 13.—President Roosevelt told several thousand persons here today that freedom of religion and the press was as worthy an objective now as it was 150 years ago.

"The people, even in those days," he said, were talking about freedom of religion and freedom of the press, just as they are rightly doing it today.

Some wondered whether he had in mind the controversy stirred by the Black-Klan episode.

With Secretary Morgenthau, the Chief Executive came to this city of forty-odd thousand on the east bank of the Hudson as a Dutchess County "neighbor" to help it celebrate its 250th anniversary by speaking at the laying of the corner stone of a new $300,000 postoffice.

With a silver trowel he helped lay the stone of the building; he took a prominent part in designing its interior decorations.

Regular army units from Fort Jay and naval squads from the new destroyer Dunlap assisted the national guard in forming a guard of honor at the site, now hardly more than a hole in the ground.

Convention Met There.

The President did not return to historic Poughkeepsie for its three-mile midafternoon parade or its evening carnival, final events in a three-day celebration of the days when the first white people settled this region in the latter part of the seventeenth century.

He spent his first afternoon at Hyde Park resting. There were no official callers.

The President prefaced his reference to religious freedom with a tracing of the city's long history. He recalled that only two blocks from the post office site the State convention met in 1788, to pass on ratification of the Federal Constitution. His great, great grandfather, Isaac Roosevelt, was a delegate to that meeting.

The President concluded his informal speech by referring to his many trips to Hyde Park. Though a temporary resident "elsewhere," he said he comes to Hyde Park and vicinity "just as often as public business will let me and I am going to keep on coming back and being your neighbor."

Fireman Is Killed In Baltimore Blaze

Baltimore, Oct. 13 (A.P.).—Fire Lieut. James K. Harrison was killed when a paper warehouse collapsed during a five-alarm blaze tonight. Another fireman escaped by diving under a fire truck as the walls of the three-story building toppled into the street. Four other firemen were hurt in the fire, none seriously. Department officials said baled paper absorbed water, swelled, and pushed the walls outward.

A. F. L. Asks Roosevelt To Purge Labor Board; Votes Boycott of Japan

Representative Vinson Slated For District Court of Appeals

Roosevelt Considers Kentuckian, Stanch New Dealer.

The name of Representative Fred M. Vinson (Democrat), of Kentucky, is being seriously considered by the President for appointment to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, it was reliably reported here yesterday.

A vacancy was left on the court when Chief Justice George Ewing Martin retired on September 29 after 13 years of service. Another vacancy may occur on the bench after November 14, when Associate Justice Charles Henry Robb becomes eligible for retirement at 70.

Vinson, a staunch New Dealer, and coauthor of the Guffey-Vinson coal act, is chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on taxation, which opens hearings next month. He is one of the outstanding House authorities on taxes and on the Administration's next tax bill. Friends believe he may prefer to remain in the House at least until the new tax measure is completed.

A lawyer, Vinson shares the President's belief in a liberal interpretation of the Constitution, and contended to the end that the original

NLRB Purge Asked.

By the United Press.

Denver, Oct. 13.—The American Federation of Labor tonight voted a world trades union boycott of Japanese goods and demanded that President Roosevelt purge the National Labor Relations Board of alleged partisans of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Speeding toward early adjournment of its fifty-seventh annual convention, the federation unanimously indorsed the militant policy of its leaders, embracing:

A resolve to embargo immediately all products of Japan and supplement this action with a rumbling to workers of the world to unite in similar protest against the "unbelievably barbarian" aggression in China.

A petition to President Roosevelt asking him in effect to "clean out" the Labor Board, insuring its freedom from bias. This was coupled with a request that Congress amend the Wagner act to prevent "usurped authority," and insistence by A. F. of L. officials that Edwin S. Smith be removed from the board and four subordinates be discharged from regional directorships.

An attack on the pending wages and hours bill, indicating the A. F. of L. might seek elimination of the proposed fair labor standards board and calling upon the Federation to be chary of future legislation affecting workers unless the A. F. of L. itself participates in its preparation.

Tirade Launched.

A minimum of discussion accompanied this series of decisive actions. Only when the Labor Board issue was raised did any delegate rise to the rostrum.

Then, speaker after speaker thundered his dissatisfaction with the present administration of the Wagner act, charging in a range of instances that the NLRB favored C. I. O. unions.

John P. Frey, head of the metal trades department, opened the tirade against the board. He read to the delegates a resolutions committee report which charged:

That the NLRB was acting "without warrant or authority" in interfering in disputes between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. and was violating "the spirit and specific intent of the labor relations act, with decided advantage" to the C. I. O. affiliates and damage to the A. F. of L.

That the board has sought to "destroy the validity of contracts" between bona fide trade unions and employers and that such actions were taken "in some in-

Farm Clashes Likely to Mark Extra Session

Organizations Still Divided on What Relief Plan They Prefer.

By Robert C. Albright.

With farm organizations still divided on farm relief objectives, and fires already burning under Secretary of Ariculture Wallace's "ever-normal granary" plan, stormy special session weather was forecast last night.

Fred Brenckman, Washington representative of the National Grange, said his organization will oppose any program of rigid governmental farm control, and penalty features of the farm bills now pending before Congress.

Carrying Secretary Wallace's indorsement of "principles," a bill sponsored by the American Farm Bureau Federation, with control and ever normal granary features, was the basis on which Congress made farm legislation its first order of business.

The National Grange, the Farmers Union and other farm organizations broke with this measure last session, and fresh troubles loomed ahead if committees now studying farm data fail to work out a satisfactory compromise. Five days before Congress meets, the National Council to Urge Separate Court For Auto Cases

Elimination of Politics by Naming Judge for Long Term Is Proposed.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

In a move to eliminate politics, reported favoritism and so-called "fixing" practices from Washington's traffic control system, the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council at a meeting next week, will recommend establishment of a separate traffic court with a long-term judge, it was learned last night.

And in addition, to assure speedy justice, the council will urge appointment of a special prosecutor assigned solely to traffic cases, it was further reported. All highway matters would be removed from jurisdiction of the corporation counsel's office.

The council will propose appointment of both judge and prosecutor for terms of at least ten years each, with no reappointment at the close of the terms.

The judge and prosecutor then will have ample opportunity to familiarize themselves with local problems, and politics will be sidetracked if there is no possibility of second terms, it was explained.

Present court methods demand that the four Police Court judges alternate each month in Traffic Court. Hardly do the judges catch up with current traffic problems than their tnure expires and the bench is relinquished to another judge who may have been trying petty municipal offenses and has little knowledge of the traffic trend.

With a lack of uniform laws, each judge now applies his own methods of punishment. A serious offense may bring a heavy fine or jail sentence from one magistrate, and the next may pass over the same violation with a small fine and reprimand.

Advice to Wed Boss' Daughter Now Recanted by Prof. Rogers

Says Depression Put Too Much of Burden on Son-in-Law.

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 13.—Into the ashcan—along with other things material—today went Prof. Robert E. Rogers' advice to "be a snob; marry the boss' daughter."

Those were the words with which Rogers sent Massachusetts Institute of Technology's graduating class of '29 out into the world.

"Now," declared the chubby, cheerful member of M. I. T.'s English department in an interview, "I've decided the advice didn't work out as well as I expected."

Why? Were the young engineers too altruistic to accept the professor's success formula? Did the young men find they couldn't sacrifice romance for materialism?

"Not exactly," the professor chuckled. "Remember, I offered the advice in the spring of '29. The picture changed that fall."

The depression, Rogers reported, served as a test tube for his formula and found it faulty.

"You see," he said, "by marrying the boss' daughter, the young men took the chance of incurring the boss' liabilities. And I don't want to accept the responsibility of suggesting college men take that chance."

Skeleton of Child, Held 'Missing Link,' Found in Utah Cave

Discovery of the American "missing link"—possibly the oldest human skeleton ever found—was announced last night by the Smithsonian Institution.

Dr. Julian H. Steward, institution archaeologist, found the skeleton—that of a primitive child less than a year old—in a cave near Great Salt Lake in Utah, and thereby may have cleared up a blank space of several thousand years in the history of America many centuries before Christ.

Steward said in a report to the institution that he believed the skeleton was at least 5,000 years old and might be 12,000 years old.

Heretofore the only evidence of the existence of the oldest residents of North America has been "cultural" relics such as arrow heads.

Anti-Trust Talk Spurs Study of Methods Here

Justice Department Has Assembled Tons of Data on Subject.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt's call for stronger antitrust laws stimulated efforts yesterday to find the answer among a long list of proposals ranging from Federal licensing of corporations to changes in the tax laws.

Outlining his program for the coming special session of Congress in his "fireside chat" last night, Mr. Roosevelt proposed that existing laws be strengthened to end "restraints now imposed upon business by private monopolies and financial oligarchies."

Informed officials reported the Justice Department's antitrust division already has assembled tons of material relating to antitrust problems. They said the problem was so complicated it would require much further study and the cooperation of many Government agencies.

Six Plans Mentioned.

In the general Capital conjecture about possible approaches to the President's objective, these received mention:

1. Limitation of the percentage of control any corporation may exert over any industry.
2. Federal licensing of interstate corporations, with licenses denied to concerns using monopolistic practices.
3. Public competition or publicly-subsidized competition in industries where private competition fails.
4. Tariff law changes.
5. Tax law changes.
6. Patent law changes.

The Federal Trade Commission, which has a hand in administering present laws aimed at monopoly, already has recommended legislation providing that "no enterprise engaged in interstate commerce be permitted to acquire control over the assets of a competitor, whether directly or indirectly, if the combined assets or output after the union would exceed a specified percentage of the total assets or output of the industry, except under certain conditions."

O'Mahoney Bill Pending.

This plan, the commission contends, would not prevent a successful company from growing by legitimate expansion of output and sales, but would erect definite stop signs against growth tending to stifle competition.

Discouraging monopoly is one goal of a long-pending bill by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, to require interstate corporations to obtain Federal licenses before they could begin or continue operations. Under his measure corporations would have to refrain from monopolistic practices in order to hold their licenses.

Jackson Talk Studied.

Observers seeking clues to what President Roosevelt may have in mind scanned with interest an address by Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, chief of the Justice Department's antitrust division, before the Trade and Commerce Bar Association at New York September 17.

Jackson indicated the problem extended beyond Justice Department jurisdiction because it might involve changes in patent laws, tariff laws and tax laws.

The most difficult problem facing students of the antitrust situation, he said, involves the field "in which the law is powerless to restore a competition which has already vanished."

"Shall we recognize and regulate monopoly," he asked, "where competition cannot be rivived? And if so, shall we confine it to legalistic regulation modeled on public utility regulation?"

Shotgun Is Fired At C.I.O. Group in Ford Plant Strike

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 13 (U.P.).—A member of the newly formed Independent Workers Union at the locked Ford assembly plant fired a shotgun today at an automobile in which three members of the United Automobile Workers Union rode by his home.

Reports persisted that the Ford Motor Co. would close the vast plant here permanently, throwing 3,000 men out of work and stopping a $3,000,000 pay roll.

Formation of the new union—which U. A. W. leaders charge is a company union—was an underlying cause of the plant's shutdown Monday. Davis Rennison, who said he resigned from the U. A. W. to become a member of the Independent Ford Employes Union, was booked for investigation.

Politics and People

Roosevelt Session Call Is an Example of the Boldness Which Has Made Him Great.

By Franklyn Waltman

WHATEVER might be thought of the purposes which inspired his action, President Roosevelt displayed his usual political courage in calling a special session of Congress to meet on November 15, six weeks in advance of the regular session.

Not only did Mr. Roosevelt fly into the face of the traditional superstition in American politics that special sessions of Congress are political Jonahs, but he in effect invited Congress back six weeks earlier to say what it might about his reoriented foreign policy and the Ku Klux Klan affiliations of Justice Hugo L. Black.

WALTMAN.

And, with Congressional elections ahead next year, certain members of Congress will have plenty to say on both subjects. Mr. Roosevelt was warned about that by some of his best friends. He also was urged to let sleeping dogs lie, by some who do not particularly relish the legislative program he has projected for the special session. Not very many persons were enthusiastic for a special session. The President, however, followed the rule which has made him great: when in doubt be bold.

* * *

It is entirely possible that more may be said in the Senate during the special session about the foreign policy outlined by the President in his Chicago speech than about the crop control bill, especially if during that period President Roosevelt has occasion to apply the principles he enunciated. The Senate is like that. Many of its members prefer to discuss policies of international statesmanship to debating the details of important domestic legislation.

It is one of the anomalies of American politics that Congress, which frequently is content to let the President shape domestic policies as he sees fit, even to the extent of giving him carte blanche authority to spend billions of dollars, apparently distrusts him in the foreign field—a province which the Constitution particularly commits to his care.

Mr. Roosevelt's present foreign policy is meat for the Capitol Hill demagogue. The word "neutrality" has a magic appeal to the masses of people. Of course, none wants this country to go to war. Yet such is public psychology that by constantly yelling "neutrality" and "road to war," any full-lunged Capitol Hill demagogue can arouse the widespread belief that Mr. Roosevelt either nurses sinister purposes or that he is a hunk of putty in the hands of wily foreigners.

Representative George H. Tinkham's blast from Europe, suggesting the impeachment of President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull because of their failure to invoke the neutrality act in the Sino-Japanese conflict is a good sample of what may be expected when Congress reconvenes. And, of course, Senator Gerald P. Nye will raise his clarion voice. It will be a good advertisement for his next lecture tour. As a drawer of handsome lecture fees, he has a vested right in neutrality to protect.

* * *

President Roosevelt's appointment of a Kluxer to the Supreme Court is much too good an issue for it to be ignored during the special session. Efforts will be made in the House to bring impeachment proceedings against Justice Black—although they will not get anywhere aside from keeping the issue alive; Senators who called attention to the Ku Klux Klan at the time of the Alabaman's confirmation will arise to say "we told you so," and some Senators who voted to confirm undoubtedly will put lame excuses into the Congressional Record that they would not had they only known.

Meanwhile Justice Black will remain on the Supreme Court—which may in the long run be very beneficial. His presence there will be a daily reminder to the President of the costly error of being reckless and Machiavellian. The Black appointment by no means proves the President is a foe of religious and racial tolerance. But it does demonstrate he is fallible and that he frequently acts on impulses and without careful thought and consultation.

Every time Justice Black's name is mentioned Mr. Roosevelt undoubtedly shudders inwardly. Even though he wants the Black appointment regarded as a closed issue, he indicated at Poughkeepsie yesterday he is still uneasy about it. It is not a coincidence that Mr. Roosevelt selected religious and press freedom as a topic for the laying of a postoffice cornerstone a few weeks after the Black revelations.

* * *

Although the President's tenth fireside chat, occasioned by his calling of a special session, generally was regarded as innocuous, there was one phase which may become a bone for controversy. It was his quotation with approval of an unidentified economist that "the continuance of business recovery in the United States depends far more upon business policies, business pricing policies, than it does on anything that may be done, or not done, in Washington."

The inference contained in the President's speech was that industry and business, through monopolistic practices, were fully responsible for the recent rapid rise in living costs. As Mr. Roosevelt said, "a high cost of living is a great deterrent to business and business prosperity depends much upon a low price policy which encourages the widest possible consumption."

The President there is on solid ground but he will have difficulty in absolving his Administration from responsibility for increasing prices. No brief is held here for the monopolies. They undoubtedly have worked to keep prices up. But the recent price rises can be directly traced to Roosevelt policies.

Indeed, through the NRA, Mr. Roosevelt encouraged the monopoly and price-fixing he now condemns.

No industrialist can afford to grant wage increases, institute 40-hour weeks, pay social security taxes and, because of these things, increased prices for his raw materials and then sell his product at the same price. You cannot eat your cake and have it too.

Tinkham Talks Hull, Roosevelt Impeachment

Mass. Congressman Criticizes Failure to Invoke Neutrality Act.

By the Associated Press.

A suggestion that Congress consider impeachment of President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull for their failure to invoke the neutrality act in the Sino-Japanese War came yesterday from Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts.

Tinkham, who is touring Europe, made public here a cablegram he sent Hull from Geneva, Switzerland, on October 11, accusing the Secretary of State and the President of having "torn to shreds" the neutrality law and of having "nullified the will of Congress."

Act Outlines Course.

The neutrality act, on which Tinkham based his expression, directs the President to forbid the sale and transportation of munitions from this country when he finds a state of war exists. He has refrained from applying it in the Far Eastern crisis, on the grounds that war has not been declared formally, but he has placed an embargo on shipment of arms in Government-owned vessels.

Tinkham's message to Hull declared:

"The neutrality act, with its mandatory provisions, is law. It is the expressed will of Congress by an overwhelming vote. The President and you have torn to shreds this law and wholly nullified the will of Congress in reference to the war in China. He and you have defied the law and the Congress. Congress upon reassembling should seriously consider the impeachment of the President and yourself for high crime and misdemeanor."

Finds Two Hostile Axes.

In Europe, Tinkham's cable continued, there are "two antagonistic political groups of ambitious and selfish nations." One he described as the London-Paris-Moscow group, or axis, the other as the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo group.

"London is allied with Paris, and Paris allied with Moscow," he said. "Berlin is allied with Rome and Tokyo. It is national suicide for the United States to have political commitments, or entanglements, with either group, or axis. Yet the Minister of the United States to Switzerland, on your personal order, sits on the political committee here in Geneva of the League of Nations, which committee is seeking to enforce, by one means or another, the Covenant of the League of Nations in the Far East.

Six Groups Rap Roosevelt.

"Upon this same political committee sits Litvinoff, the political representative of the homicidal communistic terrorists of Russia. The Congress will never permit you or the President to make the United States the puppet state of Great Britain or the ally and political assistant of communistic Russia."

Simultaneously, six peace organizations issued a statement in Washington criticizing President Roosevelt's remarks on foreign policy in his fireside chat last night.

"The President has done nothing to correct the hypocrisy of an appeal for the observance of international law by a government which refuses to carry out its own laws," the statement said. "If the President wants to 'reach' successfully for peace, he should stand on the firm basis of obedience to law by application of the neutrality act."

The six organizations are the National Council for Prevention of War, World Peaceways, Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, Fellowship of Reconciliation, Emergency Peace Campaign, and Committee of Militarism in Education.

District to Shiver In Frosty 40's as Sun Hides Today

Put on the old red flannels today an' shake the mothballs out of last year's blankets, if you would take advice of the Weather Bureau.

Issuing a prediction of cloudy and colder, the forecast for today was a probable minimum temperature of 40 degrees. Starting with a high of 51 degrees at 7:10 yesterday morning, the mercury continued to drop throughout most of the day, registering a minimum for the day of 46 at 1 p. m.

Prediction for Maryland and Virginia was also cloudy and colder with possible showers in the western and southern portions of Virginia.

Roper Predicts Export Trade Balance in '37

Commerce Secretary Cites Recent Declines in Imports.

Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper predicted last night, in discussing American trade, that "if present trends are maintained, we should have for the entire year a modest net balance on the export side of our merchandise trade account."

The Secretary noted that the prevailing tendency in world trade was "for exports to be sustained somewhat above present levels and for the value of imports to contract."

Figures issued by the department's Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce revealed, he said, that the "decline of $20,000,000 in our imports from July to August followed a similar decline of $20,000,000 from June to July." The Secretary stated that these declines in imports were general and not confined to one particular region of the world.

Figures released at the same time from the department's finance division, tabulating foreign long-term investments in the United States disclosed a total of $6,106,000,000 thus invested in this country, the Secretary reported. Together with foreign-owned dollar balances and other short-term investments, amounting to $1,530,000,000, the total of foreign investments in this country at last year's end was slightly more than $7,600,000,000.

Roper pointed out that "the computations show that foreign investments in manufacturing enterprises in the United States comprise approximately 30 per cent of the total investments, and only in the bond category do they fail to occupy first place."

Directors of Drive Try Syphilis Test on Selves

Chicago, Oct. 13 (AP).—Directors of Chicago's city-wide campaign against syphilis submitted today to the same blood test they are asking a million citizens to take.

Dr. Reuben Kahn, of the University of Michigan, developer of the syphilis test bearing his name, donned white surgical gown and rubber gloves to personally supervise the test at a luncheon meeting where welfare and charitable organizations pledged aid to the drive.

Election Splits People's Front; Rule Imperiled

Blum's Socialists Refuse To Withdraw Ticket in Run-Off.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Oct. 13.—The powerful People's Front—union of Leftist parties which has governed France since Leon Blum came to power in May, 1936—split openly tonight over the same united front election program which put them in office.

The executive committee of Blum's Socialist Party refused to sign an agreement ordering its departmental committees to withdraw Socialist candidates from next Sunday's run-off elections in situations where another Popular Front candidate polled more votes in the first election.

The Socialists thereby bolted decisions of the Popular Assembly—political co-ordinating body of the People's Front—to which Communists, Radical Socialists and the Union of Socialist Parties already have adhered.

The action threatened the whole framework of the People's Front that now supports the government of Premier Camille Chautemps, Blum's successor.

Some political observers said the breach might be healed soon, while Rightists predicted collapse of the People's Front.

Mattson Suspect Sighted in Idaho

Mrs. Roosevelt Visits Elliott's Young Daughter

Philadelphia, Oct. 13 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt who came to Philadelphia today to address the American Prison Congress, took time out to drive to suburban Bryn Mawr to visit her 5-year-old grandson, William Donner Roosevelt.

She was met here by Mrs. Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt, former wife of Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. The younger Mrs. Roosevelt will be married late this month to Curtin Winsor, of Ardmore, Pa.

Ambassador Phillips Starts Trip to Italy

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 13.—William Phillips, United States Ambassador to Italy, sailed today on the Aquitania after a month's vacation at his home in Beverly, Mass.

He declined to comment on the Far East situation.

Robert W. Bingham, Ambassador to Great Britain, had planned to sail on the Aquitania, but canceled passage last night.

Interior Bureau Unit Votes to Join U. F. W. A.

Interior Department Lodge No. 35 has formally voted to sever connections with the American Federation of Government Employes and affiliate with the United Federal Workers of America. The vote was 73 to align with the U. F. W. A. to 4 to remain on an independent basis.

The group was unanimous against remaining in the A. F. G. E. The lodge had for some time been in a faction-split situation and one group has gone to court over custody of the $250 in the treasury.

Mrs. Pearson Gets Exclusive Custody of Boy

Reno Judge Issues New Order Settling Control Case.

By the Associated Press.

Reno, Nev., Oct. 13.—Mrs. Drew Pearson, who pursued her former husband to the Island of Sark in the British Channel last August to regain custody of her 5-year-old son, Tyler Abell, was given a court order today awarding her the exclusive care, custody and control of the boy.

Mrs. Pearson is the former Mrs. Luvie Moore Abell.

District Judge Thomas F. Moran, at today's hearing, upheld a motion presented by her Reno attorney, John Donovan, which contended the boy's father, George Abell, had disregarded a previous Nevada court order by taking young Tyler away from the United States.

Mrs. Pearson divorced Abell in Reno April 18, 1935, and at the time the court approved an agreement whereby each parent was to have custody of Tyler six months of each year.

She was married to Pearson in 1936 and early this year she filed a motion here asking exclusive custody of the child.

Following a four-day contested hearing before Judge Moran last June, Mrs. Pearson was given custody of the boy for 10½ months of each year and Abell was to have him for the remaining six weeks. The decree also provided that neither parent was to take Tyler outside the United States without permission of the other.

In The Washington Post of October 12 the statement is made that Mrs. Luvie Moore Pearson was prohibited by order of Justice O'Donoghue from furthering an action she had instituted in Nevada against Drew Pearson until the local court determined which court had jurisdiction. This statement was in error, the order of the court merely restraining Mrs. Pearson from removing her minor son, Tyler Abell, from the District of Columbia pending a hearing. Statements contained in the article in reference to transactions between the principals were intended to appear as based on Mr. Abell's bill of complaint in his suit in the District of Columbia, and The Post had no intention of making any such statements of fact on its own account. The Post expresses regret if the article contained any other implication.

2 Slashing Bandits Rob 4 Taxi Drivers Of Money and Cabs

Two knife-wielding colored ndits were being sought by police t night in four cab-driver rob- ries.

Police were attempting to iden- fy the men through marks in two ats which the bandits lost in a ruggle with their last victims, who hurled a water-meter cover at them.

Each of the drivers lost a small amount of cash and their automobiles. Two of the cars later were found abandoned.

Robert Kulp, 1227 G street southeast, was the last victim and the only one to resist. When they drew a knife, he struggled with them. His face was cut in the fight and the men fled.

Seizing the iron cover of a water meter, Kulp hurled it at the departing car. Crashing through the window, the missile made the driver lose control and the cab struck a parked car. The bandits fled.

Other victims were Carl Hansen, Takoma Park, Md., robbed of his car, and Charls M. Byers, 605 Fifth street northwest, who lost his change and cab. Charles N. Haron, 1415 East Capitol street, lost several dollars and his watch when he was forced to drive to Union Station.

Bankers Get Year To Quit Utilities

The Securities Commission yesterday gave bankers an extra year before requiring them to quit the boards of directors of registered utility holding companies and subsidiaries. The new deadline is January 1, 1939.

Officials indicated that the action was in line with the commission's policy of "going slow" in applying the 1935 utility holding company act prior to a determination of its constitutionality by the Supreme Court.

Nicky, Crowd Welcome Giraffe Quartet to Zoo; Cage Background Too Realistic for Newcomers

Animals Nibble at Painted Leaves on Wall; Visitors Warned Not to Feed Peanuts to New Inmates; Vest-Pocket Mouse Deer Make Debut Here

The first giraffes to make personal appearances at Washington Zoo in a decade arrived yesterday.

The quartet wound up their 13,000-mile trip from Port Sudan in a dead heat, notwithstanding reports that the tallest member of the troup won by a neck.

All four are babies, ranging in age from 14 months to 2 years, but they would look mighty funny in perambulators.

First thing Zoo Director William M. Mann did was announce that the public must not feed the expensive beasts peanuts or anything else, their constitutions are that delicate. Condensed milk, hay and viosterol will be their prescribed diet and anyone caught hurling goobers into the cage will be made to spend a night in the noisy birdhouse, without ear-stoppers.

The giraffes were well behaved and quiet all during the transfer from express car to trucks to their spacious quarters in the pachyderm house. Even the two females did no talking. They can't, having no vocal cords.

Nevertheless, the new arrivals paid the greatest compliment possible to the artist who painted the cage background when they actually tried to nibble "leaves" from the "trees," so natural did the vegetation appear.

Nicky Arundel, long a campaigner for giraffes in his neighborhood publication, known as "Nicky's News," was so delighted at the first sight of the creatures that he was as speechless as his idols.

The thousands who braved rain to attend the initial showing of Nicky's pets were so engrossed with them they almost forgot that the whole pachyderm house was being opened to the public for the first time.

Bungo the hippo, lolling in his pool at the opposite end of the handsome house, betrayed a pout on his half-ton lips as the visitors, given their first chance to see him in his new home, made straightway for the giraffes.

Nor did anyone seem to care much that the new tenants included, besides the giraffes, a pair of young wild cattle and a pair of African buffalo.

In yesterday's shipment from the quarantine station in Athenia, N. J., also were a pair of mouse deer, so small you can all but slip them into a vest pocket (there was a third, but it died in Athenia); two blue nose sheep, a pygmy buffalo and a couple of larger deer. There should have been a goat antelope, but he, too, succumbed to the New Jersey climate or something.

Killing of Koreans In Train 'Wrecks' Charged to Russia

Tokyo, Oct. 13 (AP).—The Domei (Japanese) News Agency reported today in a dsipatch from Hsinking, capital of Manchukuo, that the Korean Association of Suifenho on the Siberian border had charged that 3,000 Koreans who were killed and wounded in a "so-called train wreck," were massacred by the Soviet.

Brady Shelterers Sought as Captive Admits 4 Slayings

Bangor, Me., Oct. 13 (AP).—Federal sleuths today back-tracked the outlaw trail of the Al Brady gang, which yesterday came to an abrupt end when two of its members perished in a hail of machine-gun bullets, and the third was captured.

The investigators were particularly eager to learn who, if anyone, gave aid and comfort to Brady and Clarence L. Shaffer, the two who fell before G-Men's guns, and James Dalhover, the prisoner, since the trio escaped an Indiana jail a year ago.

Meanwhile Dalhover, under heavy guard, talked. Police Captain Frank Foley said the Federal agents, after lengthy questioning, obtained a confession of the band's outlawry. Murders of three policemen and a storekeeper and numerous robberies were charged against the gang.

250 Men Strike At Capitol to Aid Steamfitters

Sympathy Walkout Brings Total Involved in Dispute to 400.

An additional 250 men joined 150 steamfitters now striking on the Capitol air-conditioning system yesterday, when attempts to settle the walk-out at Architect David Lynn's conference proved futile.

At the conference yesterday were representatives of the Steamfitters and Helpers Association Local 602, who maintain that nonunion hands are being employed by M. H. Pagenhardt, contractor installing steam heaters and boilers in the power plant.

Fears that Congress would be inconvenienced due to the strike were allayed by Lynn's office. The heating system is in operation at the present time, they said.

Another meeting of the union with Lynn is scheduled this morning. Lynn and John M. Botts, union representative, expressed opinion the present difficulties would be "ironed out."

Yesterday's walkout included sheet-metal workers, electricians, asbestos workers, metal-lathers and plasterers.

According to Lynn's office, the Pagenhardt firm is not connected directly with the air-conditioning system. Pagenhardt, it was added, was paying the nonunion men regular union wages.

Lone Male Sitting In Hahn Case Jury

Cincinnati, Oct. 13 (AP).—One man sat among eleven women on a tentative murder trial jury tonight, as Judge Charles S. Bell ordered a night session of court in an effort to speed the trial of Mrs. Anna Marie Hahn, charged with fatally poisoning Jacob Wagner, 78.

Prince Georges Indicts Two for Numbers Death

Grand Jury Is Silent on Case of Missing Ex-D. C. Policeman.

Murder indictments were returned yesterday by the Prince Georges County grand jury at Upper Marlboro, Md., against two alleged principals in the "numbers racket" slaying of Samuel Jeffrees, colored, of Camp Springs, Md., two weeks ago.

Those indicted were Fred Schinman, 39, of the 1300 block of M street northwest, and Frank Guy, colored, 32, of the first block of G street northwest. Both men are in custody, Schinman in Washington and Guy at Upper Marlboro.

Court officials declined to reveal whether the jury had indicted Thomas Henry Hook, former District policeman, who has been sought in connection with the murder since Saturday. Under rules of the court, the sheriff is given 48 hours in which to make arrests in the case of indicted persons who are still at large.

Schinman and Hook were near the scene of the shooting, according to Prince Georges County Policeman Edwin Cissel. He said two men answering their description stopped at his car shortly before Jeffrees was shot to inquire directions to "Jeffrees' place."

Police arrested Schinman and Guy several days after the murder, but so far they have found no trace of Hook.

"I helped a TOBACCO PLANTER pick a truly great whiskey"

Gilbert Bundy

HE SAID

"You certainly plant the impression with me that Four Roses has aroma, body, flavor, smoothness—just about everything I could ask for in a whiskey. But how can you back up what you say?"

I SAID

"Let me illustrate the answer. How do they produce the finest smoking tobacco?"

HE SAID

"First, they take several top-grade tobaccos—some of my Burley, and a little Turkish and Virginia—each with its own special qualities. Then they blend them all together to combine the qualities of all these tobaccos into one grand and glorious smoke."

I SAID

"That's precisely how we achieve Four Roses. First, we take several top-grade straight whiskies, each outstanding in some quality such as aroma, body, flavor, or smoothness.

"Then we combine all these straight whiskies (and only straight whiskies!) so as to blend the virtues of them all in Four Roses—one liquor with every whiskey virtue. That's why we believe it's America's finest, regardless of age or price."

New U. S. Ship Sabotaged by Iron in Gears

File Also Found in Machinery of Vincennes, Inquiry Reveals.

Another case of possible sabotage to a Navy vessel—the fourth in recent years—was reported to Secretary Swanson yesterday by a board of inquiry, which revealed that a file of a type not used in the service was found within the reduction gears of the new 10,000-ton cruiser Vincennes.

The file and small pieces of scrap-iron were removed from the gear box after several teeth had been stripped from the machinery. Additional metal was found in another of the four boxes on the ship, but had done no damage, it was said.

The board made no attempt to fix blame for the incident, which was discovered while the Vincennes was on a trial run off Boston. There was a possibility, it stated, that the damage was done through accident.

Nevertheless, because of the previous occurrences of similar incidents, Navy officials expressed grave concern over the possibility of organized interference with the intensive naval building program now in progress. It was evident that extraordinary precautions would be taken to prevent sabotage or accidents to other major vessels being rushed to completion, including two superdreadnaughts, the North Carolina and Washington being built in the New York and Philadelphia yards.

The sister ship of the Vincennes, the U. S. S. Quincy, also built at the Fore River plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, suffered similar damage while undergoing tests off Boston. Noises heard in the gear boxes were investigated and a spanner wrench was found in the machinery. Extensive repairs were necessary.

While the Quincy was under construction a fire broke out in auxiliary machinery and spread to the engine room. The fire delayed completion of the ship for several months.

In August, 1936, the cruiser Indianapolis, while being overhauled at the New York Navy Yard, was damaged by fire, and the following month electric cables were found which had been short circuited by phonograph needles and nails.

A $250,000 fire swept the battleship Colorado while it was waiting at Colon, Panama, for passage through the canal in 1930. Its origin was never thoroughly determined.

After drydocking and repairs at Boston, the Vincennes yesterday was reported somewhere off the East coast engaged in maneuvers. She is tentatively scheduled to leave Boston November 5 to join the Pacific Fleet.

The ship was launched February 24, 1937, at Fore River. She is the newest of the Navy's heavy cruisers.

Tammany Accepts Mahoney in Effort To Unify Factions

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 13.—Tammany, remembering the lessons of 150 years, closed ranks—at least publicly—tonight in support of a mayoral candidate its leaders never wanted, and against a foe striking all at once from a bewildering number of quarters.

The leaders of Tammany held a noisy "ratification meeting" to spread the word that it stood behind Jeremiah T. Mahoney, the Democratic nominee.

Christopher Sullivan, its chieftain, and most of the rest of its big-wigs had fought Mahoney, a pro-New Deal Democrat, bitterly in the primary, but their man, Senator Royal S. Copeland, went down to overwhelming defeat.

There was recognition not only of the necessity for unity, but there was knowlede, too, that perhaps never had Tammany been so sore beset.

Its enemy, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, not only has marshaled the reformists of a kind that in the past have triumphed over Tammany, but he has been given the backing of a wide assortment of other groups.

The Republicans have nominated him; so has the American Labor Party. The Communists support him; so, too, does a wing of the Socialist Party.

Girl, 16, Slain, Boys Blame a Stranger

Mishawaka, Ind., Oct. 13 (AP).—Sixteen-year-old Melba Moore, daughter of a village truck driver, was shot fatally last night by a motorist to whom her two boy companions intended to be samaritans.

Charles Walton, 17, one of the girl's escorts on a night ride about the countryside, had a shoulder wound which he told Sheriff William Hosinski was inflicted by one of six bullets fired by a middle-aged man standing by an auto apparently stalled along the byroad on which they were driving. The other boy, Adolph Stopper, 20, was uninjured.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Song recital by Gertrude Borzi, soprano, in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom Wednesday night with Arpad Sandor at the piano. Program of arias by Scarlatti, Veracini, Mozart, Spohr, Bishop and Delibes, and songs by Treharne, Watts, Liszt, Dalcroze, Fourdrain, Turina, Obradores, Giannini and Strauss-La Forge.

A friendly audience greeted the first professional appearance here of Gertrude Borzi, whose undergraduate years were passed in Trinity College. Not only was the young soprano the recipient of a hearty welcome and floral tributes in abundance, but she was also accorded that benevolent appreciation which sustains confidence at a time when it is most needed. If aught more had been needed for encouragement, it would have been supplied by the sympathetic and expert accompaniments of Arpad Sandor, upon whom any singer can rely implicitly.

Endowed with a light lyric voice of clear quality, Miss Borzi is at present overtaxng it with fioritura ambition. Her first group contained Scarlatti's "Se Florindo e fedele," the familiar "Pastorale" of Veracini, and two arias from "Don Giovanni." Two florid numbers, Spohr's "Rose Softy Blooming" and Bishop's "Love Has Eyes," were included in the second group, and for the climactic flight there was "Ou va la jeune Hindoue" from "Lakme." By the time that the Delibes aria was reached, evidences of strain on the vocal cords were apparent.

Imperfect breath control was responsible for the inequalities in tonal rondure that betrayed the natural beauty of her voice and had its part in the unsteadiness and breadth of her trills and in the whiteness of her highest notes. These are remediable flaws in a youthful singer as promising in artistry as Miss Borzi.

When she confined herself to simple lyricism, she disclosed a tenderness of tone and an ease of phrasing that were gratifying to the ear. Treharne's "A Widow Bird Sat Mourning" was admirably sung, and one wished that her program had contained more of this type of music and less of the agile school. With her pliancy of utterance and her capability for lyric delicacy, she should reach a fine achievement in emotional shading.

Mrs. Rosa Decker Rites to Be Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Rosa B. Decker, 85, prominent member of the Order of Eastern Star, who died Tuesday, at Garfield Hospital, will be held at 2 p. m. today in Hines funeral home, 1901 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Decker was one of the founders of Friendship Chapter, Order of Eastern Star. Born in Cumberland, Md., she had lived in Washington for more than 75 years. Her husband, Fred Decker, who died in 1931, had been a proofreader for The Washington Post and the Washington Star for many years.

She had made her home at 3728 Yuma street northwest. Surviving are three grandchildren, Virginia, Helen and Charlotte Decker, all of Washington.

Mrs. Sterling Dies; Made Debut Here

Erie, Pa., Oct. 13 (AP).—Mrs. Mary Ingersoll Sterling, widow of a law associate of Joseph H. Choate, one-time Ambassador to England, died today.

She was born in Peoria, Ill., a daughter of the late Ebon Clark E. Ingersoll, former Representative from Illinois, and Mary Clark Ingersoll.

Mrs. Sterling, who made her debut in Washington, married Willis Betts Sterling in New York in 1891. She was a sister of the late John C. Ingersoll, of the diplomatic corps, and a niece of the late Col. Robert Ingersoll, of New York.

H. G. Wells to Open Series of Lectures

A course of cultural lectures by five of the leading minds of the world was announced yesterday by the Washington Forum.

The series will be opened by H. G. Wells, the famous British writer and philosopher, who arrived in New York yesterday to begin his first American lecture tour.

Wells will speak before the forum November 3 in Constitution Hall, taking as his topic, "A View of Things to Come."

The second speaker will be Dale Carnegie, widely known writer and human relations counselor, who will speak on "How to Win Friends and Influence People." Date of his address will be announced later.

Count Raoul de Sales, French newspaperman, who recently was awarded the Swartzburg Prize for "outstanding work in promoting a better understanding between two continents," will be the third speaker, discussing "The International Situation."

The fourth speaker will be Sinclair Lewis, the author, who will choose as his subject "How to Make Friends Go Like the Wind."

Thomas Mann, the German novelist and champion of democracy, will be the final speaker.

Chairman of the lecture series is Jesse H. Knight.

Rep. Scott to Wed.

Los Angeles, Oct. 13 (AP).—Representative Byron N. Scott, of the Eighteenth California District, said today he would marry Miss Eunice MacFreed late this month and go to Washington on his honeymoon.

"TAKE MY WHOLE CELLAR, BUT SPARE MY HILDICK!"

Because Hildick blends perfectly in any drink.

You can make any drink with Hildick...but that's only part of the story. Hildick's flavor really adds something to the drink. And only a fine liquor, such as Hildick...distilled from wholesome, delicious October apples...can attain such rare relish.

Hull to Assist At Ball to Aid Hungry Pupils

Will Be Chairman of the Patrons' Committee; Hazen Named.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday was named chairman of the patrons' committee for the charity ball to be held at the Mayflower Hotel October 28 for the benefit of the free school lunch fund. Other distinguished persons on the committee for the event include District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who will be general chairman.

The Citizen's Emergency Committee for Feeding Hungry School Children, which is sponsoring the ball, appointed Ruth E. Madden assistant to Commissioner Hazen. The advisory council consists of Edward F. Colladay, of the Board of Trade, chairman; Ford E. Young, of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, Theodore Grape, of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations, and Thomas E. Lodge, of the Federation of Citizens' Associations.

On the entertainment committee are Hardie Meakin, Carter Barron, Harry Lohmeyer, Sylvan King and Sidney B. Lust. Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, chairman of the ticket committee, will be assisted by Edward A. Dent and Miss Kathryn Harrison, with Admiral Cary T. Grayson as an honorary member.

The affair will be promoted among Government employes by Frank Bergfeld. Dick Leven is in charge of publicity.

Tuesday night a benefit performance of "Rigoletto" by the Columbia Grand Opera Co., of New York, will be presented at the Rialto Theater. It was announced that 7 cents will be contributed to the fund for every ticket purchased. Proceeds of the District Young Democrats' dance tomorrow evening at the Old Dominion Boat Club in Alexandria, also will be turned over to the fund.

This evening at 8 all groups working on the lunch drive will meet at Wesley Hall, 1703 K street northwest, to discuss further plans.

The committee asked the co-operation of proprietors of hotels, stores and restaurants in its "Take A Child To Lunch" project. It suggests that milk bottles be placed in such establishments to collect contributions from patrons. The funds are to be turned over to committee headquarters at the Mayflower Hotel.

J. H. Tatspaugh's Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for John Henry Tatspaugh, 78, former ordnance supervisor at the navy yard, who died Tuesday at his home, 617 Montgomery avenue, Laurel, Md., will be held at 2:30 p. m. today in the Laurel Baptist Church. Burial will be in the National Capital Memorial Park Cemetery.

Mr. Tatspaugh was born in Washington and for 23 years was employed at the navy yard, retiring as supervisor of the ordnance department to enter the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. He left the Government service in 1923. He had lived in Laurel since 1911.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Wilhelmina Tatspaugh; four daughters, Miss Frances Tatspaugh, Mrs. Helen Clum, Miss Bobbie Tatspaugh and Miss Anna Tatspaugh, all of Laurel; two sons, Albert and Walter Tatspaugh, and a sister, Mrs. Frances Murray, of Washington.

SEC Refuses Plea To Reopen Case

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission refused yesterday to reopen a case in which it permitted the International Paper & Power Co. to issue new securities under a plan of recapitalization.

The request was made by John Lawless, jr., a stockholder, who since has appealed to the First Circuit Court of Appeals.

The commission announced it would stand by its former decision, although retirement of former Chairman James M. Landis changed the majority viewpoint about the plan.

Settlement House Is Pushed To Feed a Few Hugry Children

Five of School Age in Family Get Only Square Meals at Place; Superintendent Points to Need of Lunch Fund.

"Sister won't be here today on account of it's raining and she has no coat and her shoes have holes in them," 11-year-old Johnny said yesterday as he sat down to lunch at Opportunity House. With Johnny were his 9-year-old brother and two younger sisters 8 and 7.

All five children are students in the Gale-Seaton-Blake district, one of the communities which will benefit most from the $100,000 fund being raised to provide hot lunches for underprivileged elementary school children.

"I know for a fact that the only real meal these children get at present is the lunch we give them," said Miss Bessie Baker, superintendent of the Settlement House, to which about 20 pupils come each noon. "Goodness knows, we can't give them much ourselves."

According to Miss Baker, Johnny's family consists of two young children and an older son in addition to the five of school age, who lunch at Opportunity House. The father is able to work and thus ineligible for relief. Yet he is unable to find a job.

The family's income averages about $7 a week. Even this sum is uncertain, however, for it consists chiefly of what the oldest son makes on occasional truck-driving jobs. To supplement his earnings, the 9-year-old boy collects old newspapers and sells them to junk dealers.

"They have moved from one set of rooms to another three times within the last six weeks," Miss Baker said. "They simply can't pay the rent, that's all."

People who say that times are better and that people just can't be going hungry in Washington should do a little mental arithmetic, Miss Baker said.

"The children need 21 meals a week; we are giving them about a quarter of all they should have. For the 9,000 or 10,000 school children in this section there are, of course, three or four times as many preschool children and adults. We are only scratching the surface by providing school lunches."

Vinson Likely To Be Named Appeals Judge

former member of the Board of Tax Appeals and former special assistant to the Attorney General was appointed to the same court by the President, to succeed the late Justice Josiah A. Van Orsdel. Miller, who was 49, was confirmed by the Senate three days later, and took his oath on August 30.

It could not be learned whether Vinson was under consideration for the vacancy caused by Martin's retirement, or a possible second vacancy that would be caused by the retirement of Robb.

Vinson actively supported Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, for the post of House Majority leader, and himself is one of the House leaders under the Bankhead-Rayburn regime.

Born in Louisa, Ky., January 22, 1890, he graduated from the Kentucky Normal College and received AB and LL. B. degrees from Centre College. He started law practice at Louisa, became city attorney and was afterward commonwealth attorney for the thirty-second judicial district of Kentucky. With the exception of the Seventy-first Congress, he has been continuously a member of the House since 1923.

Doughton Declines To Run for Senate

Declining to enter the North Carolina Senatorial primaries in June, Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, indicated he would support the announced candidacy of Representative Frank Hancock for a Senate seat.

Hancock already had announced he would oppose Senator Robert R. Reynolds, North Carolina Democrat, in his race for re-election next year, and speculation had turned on whether Doughton would relinquish his important committee post to enter the race.

The 73-year-old Doughton would not comment on whether he will run for re-election next year. When he planned to enter the race for Governor of North Carolina in the last election, President Roosevelt persuaded him to retain his House chairmanship.

Frank Discussion Urged on Parents

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 13.—Frank discussion between parents and children, with "no subjects taboo," was urged by Margaret Culkin Banning, novelist, of Duluth, Minn., today at the convention of the New York State Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Mrs. Banning, the mother of several children, took part in a discussion with nine other leaders in various fields.

Oliver M. Butterfield, author and counselor on family and marriage problems, also stressed the value of frankness, but warned that free talking can be over-stressed so that it is "much like indecent exposure." He added that for children "there are some things that are premature."

form your excellency of the following:

"The German government has taken note with special interest of public statements which the Belgian government has made for clearing up its international position.

"On its part, the German government has repeatedly expressed its opinion in this respect, especially through the declaration of the German Reichschancellor in his speech on January 30, 1937.

"Furthermore, the German government has taken note of statements of the British and French governments on April 24, 1937.

"In view of the fact that the conclusion of a definite agreement to take the place of the Locarno Pact has occupied considerable time, the German government considers it desirable to define its policy.

Will Aid Defense.

"With this object in view, it makes the following statement:

1. The German government has taken note of the standpoint adopted by the Belgian government on its own authority, namely:

(a) It proposes to follow with full sovereignty a policy of independence.

(b) It is determined to defend the frontiers of Belgium with all its power against any attack or invasion and to prevent Belgian territory from being used for attack against another state, either as a means of access or as a basis for operations by land, seas or air, and with this object to organize the defense of Belgium in an effective manner.

2. The German government declares the inviolability and integrity of Belgium in any circumstances and to respect Belgian territory at all times except, naturally, in a case where Belgium might be collaborating in military action against Germany in an armed conflict in which Germany might be involved.

3. The German government is prepared, as are the British and French governments, to give Belgium support in the event of it being the object of an attack or invasion."

The brief Belgian declaration, handed over simultaneously, expressed Belgium's "great satisfaction and best thanks."

Navy Building Modern Plant to Test Models Of War and Trade Ships Near Cabin John

Steam shovel at work on foundations for the Navy's new model ship plant at Carderrock, Md., 2 miles beyond Cabin John. Designed for testing naval and private vessels alike, the plant will be the most modern in the world.

Miniature Hulls to Be Built and Studied in Huge Tanks.

The ships of the Nation—built to serve in peace and war—will be tested in a few years in the world's most modern model ship plant, now under construction at Carderrock, Md., 2 miles beyond Cabin John, in Montomery County.

Known as the Naval Experiment Basin, the project covers about 108 acres of rocky soil, and is directed and supervised by the Navy Department. When it is completed and fully equipped, three or four years from now, it will become a laboratory for war and commercial vessels, serving private firms as well as the Government.

Work on the project was begun August 25, supervised by Commander L. E. Combs, U. S. N.

The contract calls for an expenditure of $2,634,780 for the buildings, which are expected to be finished in 1939. Then there will be the work of equipping the model-making plant with delicate machinery and completely outfitting three tanks, where miniature hulls of men of war and pleasure craft alike will be tested.

One tank will be known as the high-speed tank, and it will be 21 feet wide, 10 feet deep and 1,000 feet long. This length eventually will be increased to 2,500 feet.

There will be a shallow basin tank, 10 feet deep, and a deep basin tank, 20 feet deep, which will run into a turning tank.

Britain, Japan, France and Italy Already Have Laboratories.

Most of the models will be taken through the water at varying speeds by means of a small motor on a track. So exact must the work be, and so correct the findings that the track on which the model mover runs must follow the curvature of the earth.

Similar plants have been built by the leading maritime powers, Great Britain, Japan, Italy, France and Germany.

Japanese Free U. S. Reporter Seized as a Spy

Writer Is Detained 15 Days After Starting Out to Follow Army.

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, Oct. 13.—Haldore Hanson, Associated Press correspondent in North China, returned here today after his release by Japanese military police who had held him at Paotingfu the last 15 days.

He had been arrested as a spy suspect.

"With Rosalind Rinker, missionary," he said today, "I was jammed on a freight car at Paotingfu yesterday, crowded with Japanese soldiers, and brought to Fengtai, six miles outside Peiping, where we were dumped in the midnight darkness without any arrangements for us—despite military tickets reading to Peiping.

"We spent the night in a farmhouse, arriving here by ricksha and bicycle. At Paotingfu, I was grilled more than 30 hours answering the same questions dozens of times. At no time, however, was I mistreated, except for being locked in military police headquarters without food and water on four separate days. Japanese privates sometimes slipped me fruit or biscuits on these occasions."

Hanson, whose parents live in Duluth, Minn., left Peiping the morning of September 25 on a bicycle to follow the Japanese army.

"Victoria Regina" rules the stage, Victorian furniture and accessories are highlighted in decorative modes. You will renew memories of antimacassars and stuffed birds under glass bells when you see this thoroughly Victorian, yet very livable apartment we have furnished and decorated with pieces now in stock. Tufting, velvet, rose and grape carved mahogany chair frames, even a whatnot with bits of milk glass and porcelain figurines, and, of course, prism lamps that twinkle primly. Flower prints hang in the bed room, also in mahogany but not quite so Victorian as the living room. The colors are rich plum, reds with a blue cast, black backgrounds in tapestry and chintz, all carried out in upholstery, rugs, pictures and draperies done in the Victorian manner. Come in to our Victorian apartment to see a charming, livable version of that proverbially stiff and uncomfortable-looking era.

Soft Coal Body Is Split on Jobs And Personnel

Commission 'Wouldn't Do Credit to 10-Year-Old Boy,' Lewis Says.

By the Associated Press.

John C. Lewis, Des Moines, Iowa, member of the Federal Coal Commission created by Congress to regulate the soft coal industry, revealed a rift yesterday in the seven-man board over patronage and personnel.

Lewis, who was backed by John L. Lewis, the C. I. O. labor leader, for his place on the commission, announced he had asked Senator Herring (Democrat), Iowa, to seek from commission officials an accounting of expenditures and a list of jobs and their salaries.

Only two days ago Lewis and two other members of the commission were defeated by a 4-to-3 vote in an effort to keep commission meetings open to the public and news reporters. At that time Commissioner Lewis said he was "getting sick and tired of being hooked in the back and buffeted about like a jackass."

He said the work of the commission "wouldn't do credit to a 10-year-old boy."

Salary List Refused.

In a letter to Senator Herring, Lewis included a copy of a resolution he submitted to the commission asking for a list of the coal commission jobs and salaries. It was turned down by a majority of the members.

In a memorandum accompanying the resolution, Lewis charged that some members of the board were allowed to select personnel for only one or two statistical bureaus attached to the commission, while others were allotted as many as 11.

Lewis' allies in the minority faction include Commissioners Percy Tetlow, another commisison protege of John L. Lewis, and Pleas Greenlee, one-time Democratic leader in Indiana under the regime of former Gov. Paul V. McNutt.

Chairman Hosford Silent.

Lined up on the majority faction are Chairman Charles F. Hosford, jr., C. E. Smith, Thomas Haymond and Walter H. Maloney.

Chairman Hosford refused to talk to news reporters about the split.

Well-informed sources expressed the opinion that if the break threatened to interfere with the commission's job of regulating the industry, and fixing and enforcing minimum prices, the dominant group on the commission probably would ask President Roosevelt to intervene.

Commissioner Lewis, it was learned, has proposed laying the squabble before Congressional leaders and offered to resign if they did not sustain his position.

Still Short of Goal In Red Cross Drive

The Red Cross membership drive, which seeks to enroll 75,000 by midnight Saturday, has reached the 49,659 mark, it was announced last night by Marcy L. Sperry, chairman of the campaign. Sperry said he was confident the goal would be reached.

The general business and Government groups accounted for yesterday's heaviest enrollment. Chairman Edgar Morris reported more than 1,000 Woodward & Lothrop employes had become Red Cross members.

Morris also reported 100 per cent enrollments from Gude Brothers, Louis I. Bowdler, florists, and the Tivoli Theater. One of the largest business enrollments reported by Morris was 313 members from Frank R. Jelleff, Inc.

Gen. Fred W. Boschen, chairman of the Government group, reported a 100 percent enrollment from the marketing division of the National Bituminous Coal Commission.

The Mountain-y Restfulness . .

MAN'S spirit has always yearned for the serenity and the inspiration of the everlasting hills. And so has his body aspired toward their restfulness and energy-giving zest.

Up here in the old Virginia mountains—perhaps the oldest mountains in the world—thousands of people bring tired bodies, weary spirits, and find themselves quickly renewed, made over.

Sometimes, indeed, the Spa has a lot to do with it. But nearly as often it's just the perfectly-ordered life of The Homestead, the complete and simple luxury in which one is enveloped. Sometimes the ministrations of delightful living work wonders not to be undertaken by physiotherapy, or medicine, or any of their combinations.

Best of all the seasons, many a lover of The Homestead will tell you, is Autumn—which is also, here, a season of social brilliance. May we expect you?

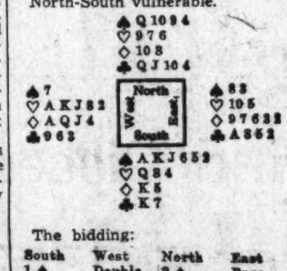
South	West	North
1 spade	Double	2 spades

North's two spade bid is, of course, technically a raise, but the point is that it does not show any real strength—far from being encouraged by this type of raise, the opening bidder should take warning that the responder is woefully weak in everything but the trump suit itself. Entirely too many players would make the rebid that South made in the following hand:

South, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Double	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

East, it should be noted, did not hesitate to double the final contract, even though he had only one sure trick. This he correctly felt was sufficient, considering his partner's advertisement of at least three honor tricks.

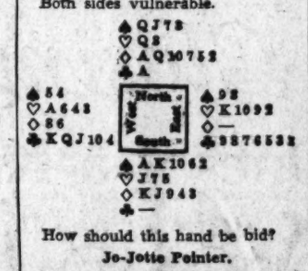
West opened the heart King. East started an echo with the ten and hearts were continued. East ruffing the third round. Defenders then proceeded to pick up two diamond tricks and the Ace of clubs, for an 800-point penalty.

It is true that East-West could have scored a game, but it would have been of the non-vulnerable variety and, therefore, worth only about 400 points. Moreover there was no assurance that they would bid the game. In fact, had South passed to two spades, West might very well have been afraid to enter the auction at the nine trick level. But, regardless of East-West's bidding, South's raise to four spades was totally unwarranted.

While the score was being entered, South defended himself by pointing to the length of his spade suit and the 3½-plus honor tricks with which he had started. North quite correctly snorted in derision. South's honor tricks had been, to a considerable propertion, composed of cards that he should have realized would be trapped under West's advertised Aces. Kings and Queens, it should be noted, have a variable value, depending on the position of other bids. Thus, for South to have continued to regard his minor Kings and heart Queen as taking tricks in the face of West's takeout double was nothing short of ridiculous.

Tomorrow's Hand.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



How should this hand be bid?

Jo-Jotte Pointer.

When a hand contains two Aces, a guarded ten or King in a third suit, and at least a 30-point count, a notrump contract may be risked despite the holding of an unguarded suit. The bidding is, of course, done with the first six cards, and a void suit need cause no particular worry. But never depend on the draw to fill out the quota of two Aces. And not even the extreme strength of Aceten in each of two suits justifies a notrump bid when the other two suits are wide open.

MEN LOVE PEPPY GIRLS

IF you are happy and peppy and full of fun, men will take you places. If you are lively, they will invite you to dances and parties.

BUT, if you are cross and lifeless and always tired out, men won't be interested in you. Men don't like "quiet" girls. Men go to parties to enjoy themselves. They want girls along who are full of pep.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system; thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't Be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

Walton League Joins Fight on Abattoir in D.C.

Special Session of Congress to Get Bill Charging Sewerage Fee.

Two resolutions condemning the erection of an abattoir at Benning by the Adolph Gobel Co. were adopted by the Washington chapter of the Izaak Walton League last night at the Raleigh Hotel.

The first urged the national council of the league to ask Senators and Representatives for legislation that would make the construction of the abattoir impossible.

Copies were ordered sent to the Commissioners, the United States Public Health Service and the administrative board of the PWA.

The second resolution was introduced by Dr. Louis Radcliffe, vice president of the Washington chapter and president of the Regional Council, a consulting scientist and an international expert on fishing.

His resolution contained an appeal to the Gobel firm to refrain from the construction of an abattoir.

Principal speaker was Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, who attacked the proposed abattoir, and pointed out that it would cost District taxpayers between $55,000 and $110,000 a year extra in sewage disposal alone.

Meanwhile, another bill designed to discourage the operation of abattoirs in the Capital was in the making at the District Building yesterday and will be submitted to the special session of Congress.

The measure would authorize the District Commissioners to charge nuisance industries for the treatment of wastes dumped into the city's sewage system in proportion to the amount.

Last session Congress refused to enact legislation which would have prevented the Gobel Co. from operating in Washington. It is expected that the new legislation will run into opposition as well.

Juvenile Court Bill's Passage Is Predicted

Rep. Palmisano Foresees Approval of Reform by Special Session.

Congressional approval at the November session of the Norton-Copeland bill to change the District Juvenile Court from a criminal court to chancery tribunal was predicted yesterday by Chairman Palmisano of the House District Committee.

The juvenile court bill was left in conference hen Congress adjourned in August. Vital differences between the Senate and House remain to be settled, but Palmisano expressed the belief an accord will be reached.

Action on four bills on the House calendar, Palmisano said, will depend upon whether House leaders allow time for local legislation.

The four measures seek to provide (1) semi-annual inspection of all motor vehicles (2) a 40-hour, 5-day week for firemen (3) a 60-year retirement age for firemen, and (4) regulation of barber shops.

Palmisano said the House District Committee, however, will tackle whatever legislation program the Commissioners submit and will hold public hearings on District reorganization bill or bills as soon as they are offered.

Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, has not returned from Hawaii, but it was said that he doubtless will push local legislation at the special session.

Joint hearings probably will be held by the two committees on the Government reorganization proposals.

G. U. Law Alumni Meet.

Georgetown Law School alumni held a luncheon meeting at the Raleigh yesterday. Charles Fahy, general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, was the speaker.

Fidelity Asset Sale Approved by U. S.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board yesterday approved the contract for sale of Fidelity Building and Loan Association assets to the new Federal Savings and Loan Association, virtually completing the reorganization of the defunct bank.

Following submission of the contract to the District Court and providing the plan is approved, more than 18,000 shareholders will be entitled to 85 cents on the dollar of their investments.

James H. Nolan, receiver for the old Fidelity, will submit the contract to the court for approval. If the court approves, the new Federal Savings will take over the assets and make available either shares in the new institution or the 85 per cent payment on the original investment of shareholders who do not elect to participate in the new enterprise.

Franco Fights For Humanity, Catholics State

Group Challenges Protestants to Indorse Loyalist 'Persecution.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 13.—A group of prominent American Catholic clerics and laymen tonight issued a manifesto saying the Spanish insurgents were fighting for justice and humanity, and challenging American Protestants to say whether they were willing to indorse the Spanish government's "ruthless persecution of the Christian religion."

The statement was in answer to one published October 4 by 150 Protestants who sharply attacked a pastoral letter on the Spanish situation which had been issued by the hierarchy of Spain.

The Protestant statement, said tonight's statement by the Catholics, had "not only misrepresented the facts and the issues in Spain but it has tended also to create a species of religious war in the United States."

"Though the signatories of this present reply to the open letter are accepting the challenge contained in the letter signed by the 150 Protestant clergymen and laymen," it added, "the challenge in reality is to American protestantism.

"Specifically, the challenge is this: Do American Protestants accept and indorse a governmental regime that has carried on a ruthless persecution of the Christian religion since February, 1936?

"Does American protestantism indorse a regime that is composed predominantly of Radical Socialists, Communists, syndicalists and anarchists?

"Does American protestantism champion a regime that has consistently violated in theory and in practice the fundamental principles of liberty and democracy guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States?"

The Spanish bishops, the manifesto went on, "are the men who should be championed by the ministers of religion whether these be Catholic, Protestant or Jewish. They are not the men who should be calumniated and attacked by Protestant clergymen.

"The Spanish bishops have protested, as men, as citizens, as Christians, against a world propaganda that would aid and abet the destroyers of their social, religious and national life.

"Their cause is not the cause of Catholics alone, nor yet of Christians alone, but of all men who believe in social and international peace and moral law. The least we can do is to afford them a respectful hearing, and not heap them with abuse."

Disputes About Farm Programs Indicate Congress Is Likely to Have Stormy Session

Grange meets in convention in Harrisburg, Pa., to promulgate its stand.

Faced with a 17,573,936-bale cotton crop forecast, and a corn crop likely to run to 2,561,281,000 bushels, the Administration was seeking to curb surplusage in 1938 by a system of loans to farmers, storage of crops, and either voluntary or compulsory reductions through benefit payments. Loans to corn producers, and a variation of the plan for cotton, were likely to be the first "ever normal" items, if the plan is adopted.

It was pointed out here that Congress agreed to the "fundamental principles" of the plan in the resolution making permanent farm legislation its next order of business. Little-publicized features of that resolution declared for "storage of reserve supplies of big crop years for use in times of crop failure."

The resolution also declared for a system of loans supplementing the soil conservation program, and said:

"Control of agricultural surpluses above the ever-normal granary supply is necessary to safeguard the Nation's investment in loans and to protect farmers against a price collapse due to bumper yields resulting in production beyond all domestic and foreign need."

While Congress came out for these general principles, the Senate Agriculture Committee balked at the farm bureau federation bill, and the committee is now holding hearings with farmers to work out a substitute. Wallace opposed only provisions for lowering the tariff on farm products when prices went out of bounds.

It was a split between the farm organizations themselves that blocked action on the bill last session, and there has been no harmonizing of differences while Congress was in recess.

The National Grange wants to build a new program on the basis of the present soil conservation act, with less emphasis on the "family-sized" farm, which its leaders believe should not be made subject to serious crop adjustment upheavals, or to penalties fro non-compliance They would limit restrictions to large commercial farms, and place a top limit on benefits.

The Farm Bureau Federation insists that acreage diversion and production control must be invoked to control surpluses over adequate supply. Their pending bill would impose voluntary control at the outset, and if this did't work, compulsory marketing quotas.

A more moderate bill was introduced in the House by Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agriculture committee, and the Senate Agriculture committee will attempt to compose differences following talks with farmers in the West and the South.

Other than to forecast that some permanent farm legislation will be adopted in the special session, Congressional leaders at this time are taking little part in the controversy.

The only nominal leader in town when the President's call was issued was Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, assistant Senate majority leader, and he quipped, "I have nothing to whip and nothing to lead." Minton said the special session will have been justified if a farm program is adopted.

Meantime, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, who discussed farm economics in a speech in Charleston, S. C., last Saturday, denied he was in conflict with Secretary Wallace's farm views.

"My opinion of any subsidy program," he said, "is that it looks toward effecting a balance in present conditions, and in addition, to the hope of reaching methods which will not require subsidies."

350 Warplanes Battle in New SpainOffensive

Italian Ships Repel Raid by 80 Loyalist Craft; 30 Shot Down.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Oct. 13.—Spanish insurgents and loyalist fought for supremacy in the air today. Nearly 350 warplanes were engaged on the northern fronts and 30 were reported to have been shot down.

On the Aragon front, where a fleet of 80 loyalist planes attempted to wipe out the insurgent stronghold of Saragozza, a squadron of new Italian ships entered the dog-fights.

It was reported without confirmation that Premier Benito Mussolini's son, Bruno, was a pilot of one of the Nationalist planes that finally drove off the raiders.

A fleet of 70 insurgent planes bombarded Sobiebressa on the Asturian front near the Bay of Biscay where Generalissimo Francisco Franco's armies are closing in upon Gijon, last loyalist port of importance of the northwest coast. At the same time 20 loyalist planes attacked in the Collado de Fuente region of the Asturias where heavy fighting has been under way for 48 hours.

Madrid Bombarded.

Madrid, Oct. 13 (U.P.).—A devastating rebel artillery bombardment of the center of Madrid tonight killed and wounded scores of persons.

Many of the explosives fell in the so-called neutral zone around the foreign embassies. A shell smashed through the skylight of the ministry of foreign affairs building and landed in the press room, forcing newspaper correspondents to take refuge in storm cellars.

Windsors Reading Books on Virginia

Richmond, Va., Oct. 13 (AP).—The Duke of Windsor will have opportunity to brush up on his Virginia history before his expected visit to the Old Dominion, in reading two books given the duke and duchess as a wedding gift by a Richmond relative of the duchess.

The books are "Stratford Hall, the Great House of the Lees," by Ethel Armes, and "Legends of Virginia."

The duchess in a letter, whose recipient declined to be named, expressed the hope that "by digesting the two (books), my husband will absorb some of the charm which our part of America has in such abundance."

The duchess wrote that she hoped "the duke will some day come to Virginia. It is a part of America he has never seen, too."

"It is lovely here," the letter read, "and peaceful at last, after such horrible months of strain."

Il Duce Balks Revolt, Jails Nine Plotters

Anti-Fascist Intellectuals Seized for Scheme to Overthrow Leader.

By the United Press.

Rome, Oct. 13.—Nine anti-Fascist "intellectuals" have been sent to prison after discovery of a plot to overthrow Premier Benito Mussolini and establish a revolutionary government, it was announced tonight.

The convicted conspirators, taken before the tribunal for defense of the state, received prison terms ranging from one to ten years on charges of "plotting to change the form of government" violently and the propagation of revolutionary theories."

Five other suspects tried with them were acquitted.

The case was the first to be heard by the tribunal for defense of the state—dealing only with treason and rebellion—since the Italo-Ethiopian war.

Five of the nine defendants received 10-year terms. They were Rudolfe Morandi, Mario Venanzi, Vittorio Ravazzoli, Alfredo Testa and Aligi Sasau.

Angelo Accorsi was sentenced to four years and Angelo Gabellini and Francisco Fioratti to three years. Francisco Bravi received a one-year sentence.

Details of their alleged conspiracy were not revealed.

Those acquitted were Mario Luzzatto Franco Antolini, Giorgio Todeschini, Luigi Mauri and Alberto Malagugini.

Plainsmen's Rites Held for Cowhand In N. Y. 'Garden'

New York, Oct. 13 (U.P.).—The band made a dirge out of "The Eyes of Texas Are Upon You." Six cowboys carried a coffin through a door into vast, empty reaches of Madison Square Garden. They put it down on the sawdust.

The lights were dim. The doors were locked against the city people. While the taxicabs honked and the elevated trains roared through the heart of New York, they held a plainsman's funeral early today for Walter Cravens, one of the best cowhands in the world championship rodeo. His coffin rested on the precise patch of sawdust where a steer trampled him so badly at last Saturday night's performance that he died.

Only Cravens' fellow members of the rodeo attended. Tonight the body was sent home to Butler, Okla., for burial.

Good Job, All Around.

There will be little or no public disapproval for the short burst of street fighting which took the lives of the notorious Al Brady and one of his henchmen in Bangor. The simultaneous capture of a third gunman shows that there was no unnecessary killing. Incidentally, it completely mops up the gang which, through a process of bitter elimination, had succeeded to the dubious honor of being known as the country's No. 1 menace.

The long record of holdups and murders traced to Brady and his associates is thus ended—and none too soon. To judge from a sketched floor plan found on one of the men, they were about to rob a Bangor bank. When trapped, indeed, they were negotiating for the purchase of a weapon with which to execute the plan. And here they made that fatal slip of the sort which few criminals long avoid. They blandly walked into a quiet sporting goods store and asked for a machine gun.

Suspicions were immediately aroused, of course. But suspicions alone would have been of small avail without speedy and effective support from the police. This, fortunately, was immediately available. Local, State and Federal officers deftly laid a trap and sprang it at precisely the proper moment. In so doing they demonstrated a practical co-operation which should dispose of the talk about friction between local police and the G-men.

It was a good job, all around. And any criticism of the unavoidable ruthlessness with which these killers were shot down would be misplaced sentimentality. In the realistic phrase of the wife of one of the thugs, "They had it coming to them."

Still Unbalanced.

Chairman Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, has promised to use his influence to secure a balancing of the budget during the next fiscal year, without any increase in total taxes.

Of course, such assurances have been given before, with the approval of the Administration, and each time they have been set at nought by the refusal of Congress to reform its reckless spending habits. This time, however, there is no doubt that the gravity of the situation is more fully realized and that the Administration is more determined to pay something other than lip service to retrenchment.

Apprehension over the unbalanced state of the budget is not the least important of the reasons for the gloom and anxiety which at present envelop the business world. We are now in our eighth consecutive year of deficit financing and unless Congress is willing to co-operate with Mr. Doughton by "effecting every possible economy consistent with necessary governmental services," a ninth year of deficits probably lies ahead. Already the public debt has risen from about $17,000,000,000, in 1931, to $37,000,000,000, exclusive of contingent liabilities.

The public undoubtedly wants this steady pyramiding of debt to cease, but it is equally important to see that a balanced budget does not impose oppressive taxes, calculated to retard recovery further. If Mr. Doughton has his way the taxpayer will be spared. Moreover, there are indications that he favors modification of the tax on undistributed corporate profits and capital gains. The former tax has seriously hampered business expansion by preventing reinvestment of earnings. It has borne with especial severity upon medium-sized concerns and those with weak capital structures. The latter has interfered with the normal functioning of the securities markets by making holders of securities reluctant to take their profits when prices are rising.

One advantage of a special session is that it will leave more time for consideration of new tax legislation designed to remove some of the most glaring inequities in existing laws. The elimination of the budget deficit can only be achieved by rigid economy. But balance can be maintained in the future much more surely and more easily if we act now to revise or abolish taxes that dry up the very sources of taxable revenue.

The Call For Congress.

There are many besides President Roosevelt who, as he puts it, "get bored sitting in Washington hearing certain people talk and talk" about the proper function of government. And one of the lines of talk that is getting most boring is the veritable complex to the effect that "enemies of democracy" or "economic royalists" or "financial oligarchs" or what-have-you are always somehow trying to do the Nation dirt.

According to their limited lights, and making due allowance for their feudal upbringing, many of these misguided fellows are really quite decent citizens. Their ideas, crude as they may seem when compared with those emanating from the fountainhead of wisdom, are often entirely sincere and sometimes not wholly vicious. It might even be the part of statesmanship, though perhaps not good stump speaking, to ease up on the rather cheap aspersions which have now come to seem inseparable from "fireside talks."

For wherever the function of government may be placed, between anarchy on the one hand and autarchy on the other, one negative conclusion about the function of a President may be confidently asserted. He is not doing credit to his job as first citizen if he habitually and deliberately baits and impugns the motives of certain minority groups among his fellow countrymen. And by carrying this criticism to intolerable lengths any President will risk losing in real national unity all that he may claim to have gained by a constant push toward centralization of governmental operations.

As a matter of fact there is now little disposition, from "enemies of democracy" or anybody else, to oppose the special session of Congress which the President has called for November 15. Nobody, particularly after the pronounced recession of the past few weeks, is going to argue that it is necessarily "bad for business" to call the legislators together next month. It is not the convening of Congress, but the specific program which the President demands that will determine whether or not the present slide backward is accelerated or checked.

While making his general purpose fairly clear Mr. Roosevelt, on Tuesday night, was insufficiently specific to provide a basis for judgment on his program. He gave no hint that he would try to push the utterly discredited court-packing scheme, which alone made the last session of Congress so largely futile. And he did intimate that in the present critical international situation it may prove desirable to have Congress in session. In both these respects his attitude will meet with general public approval.

Others among his intimations were more disturbing. Before the President goes further with his panacea for increasing national income by paying higher wages for less work he would do well to study the French experiment in this direction. The results of recent wages-and-hour legislation in France have been currency depreciation and price increases which have more than outstripped nominal wage gains. It is still to be demonstrated why the same cause should produce different results here.

From 1913 to 1921, Mr. Roosevelt reminds the country, he was "fairly close to world events," and in that period learned not merely what to do but also "much of what not to do."

If the President has been equally quick in learning what not to do from the contradictory and hit-or-miss recovery program of 1933, the forthcoming special session may be anticipated with equanimity. Otherwise there will be obvious risk of following past blunders with further, and perhaps far more serious, mistakes.

Municipal Co-operation.

Municipal government is generally conceded to be the weakest link in the American political system. On the whole, city administrations have been permitted to run their inefficient course with little improvement over a long period. Yet it is local regimes in our cities which, more directly than any other branch of government, affect the welfare of individual citizens.

Attention was called to the neglect of municipal problems in a recent report by the National Resources Committee. "It is to be noted and deplored," said the report, "that with the growth of cities in population and in complexity of problems, the available information regarding them grows less and less" To correct this and other deficiencies the national body's urbanism committee advanced a number of helpful recommendations.

The discussion growing out of this report will doubtless accentuate interest in the meeting this week at Chicago of the American Municipal Association. That gathering, in which some 7,000 cities are represented through State leagues, indicates that our municipalities are at least making some concerted effort to solve their difficulties by the co-operative method. Incidentally, Clarence A. Dykstra, chairman of the urbanism committee, is one of the prominent speakers at the Chicago convention.

There are many ways in which the Federal Government can aid cities to improve their standards of municipal service. But the possibilities of such co-operation are nevertheless limited by constitutional provisions. Cities are primarily responsible to State governments. Reforms will have to come largely through State legislation and municipal action.

It is gratifying, therefore, to note the interest which is being manifested by city officials in the current opportunity to discuss their common problems at Chicago.

The Spanish Ulcer.

Hesitation is not always weakness. And that may well apply to the delay of the British and French governments in carrying out the threat to open the French border in the interests of Valencia, unless Italy agrees to withdraw its "volunteers" from Spain. London and Paris, it is being said, have again knuckled down to Mussolini. But such an interpretation may have only a temporary validity.

The fact that Prime Minister Chamberlain has called the Labor Party leaders into conference on the issue reveals a determination by the British government to seek complete domestic unity in whatever steps it contemplates. Such conferences rarely occur except in times of admitted national emergency and usually foreshadow strong action.

There is no doubt that Great Britain remains loath to embark on any course, in connection with the Spanish or any other international problem, which may lead to a worsening of the situation. That is one reason why the London government has agreed to Mussolini's perhaps cynical suggestion that the problem of the withdrawal of foreign volunteers from Spain should be taken up by the London nonintervention committee. In view of the time-wasting proclivities of that body in the past there would appear to be little hope of any constructive action by it on the Spanish problem at this time.

Of this the British government is no doubt fully aware. Nonetheless it plans to give Mussolini another chance to prove his good faith. But he is not to be permitted to indulge in any dilatory tactics so as to make possible considerable reinforcements of the Italian expeditionary force in Spain while the London committee is bogged down by intentionally protracted debate. This time there is to be a time limit and if talk is shown to be fruitless it may be assumed that any action agreed upon by Great Britain and France will have general backing.

In other words, the closing of party ranks on the Spanish issue in Great Britain may be the prelude to a similar closing of national ranks in the nonintervention committee. In both cases the objective would be to confront the Spanish issue for the threat to world peace, as which President Roosevelt described it last week.

In the struggle for peace, as in time of war, it is the final victory which counts. If Mussolini, by his rejection of the three-power plan for a parley on the withdrawal problem, appears to have won another victory of prestige over Great Britain and France, it is by no means certain that this victory will be permanent. There are various reasons why the London and Paris governments should not choose, at this time, to play the card they hold in reserve. That card, in the form of opening the French border, is still there.

Bronze Or Blunette?

All is not gold that glitters. Much more probably it will soon be hair, if the predictions of the joint convention of the Hairdressers and Cosmetologists, now talking things over in Manhattan, are taken seriously.

According to these coiffure creators, it will only take a little powder and rather more nerve to make a woman shine in any society. For the powder, which may be brushed into the hair-do, is gold and silver with variations of blue and lavender. The neon sign influence is inescapable.

It used to be a comparatively simple matter to choose between blondes and brunettes. But hereafter the gentleman's task will be much more complicated. For he will not only have to consider his alternative preference between bronze and blunette, but will also have to pay some attention to all the complementary shades.

Apparently redheads have nothing to fear during the coming winter season. For there is still quite a run on henna, or so the cosmetologists report. But if a girl is undecided between the old and the new in hairdressing she may now give wider application to the observation of Anita Loos, "Red may attract a man's attention, but it takes pink or blue to hold him."

A psychologist says 20 per cent of the politicians in this country are mildly insane. And the remaining 80 per cent, we take it, are completely nuts.

We've observed this about those who do a lot of talking: They invariably manage to have others do their work.

Many an automobile has slipped off the highway because the nut at the steering wheel was oiled.

Lord Chesterfield On War.

St. Louis Post Dispatch.

"War is pusillanimously carried out in this degenerate age; quarter is given; towns are taken and the people spared . . ." Thus wrote Lord Chesterfield, the great epistolarian gentleman of the royal bedchamber and suave diplomat of eighteenth century England, on the wars that imbroiled Europe in his time. Were he living today his letter on war might read: "War is carried out in the totalitarian manner in this age of enlightenment; treaties are nothing; war begins without declaration; no quarter is given; towns are bombed by airplanes and the inhabitants slain in their sleep; piracy exists with submarines that fly no flag, torpedoing the ships of neutral nations." There is nothing pusillanimous about modern war, Lord Chesterfield.

Prank Or Riot?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Several years ago a dignified association of patriotic ladies gave an historical pageant in a nearby city. The actors were arrayed in some valuable old heirloom costumes. A group of children from the "best homes," students in an exclusive private school, were in the audience. For some reason best known to their adolescent selves they pelted the actors with rotten tomatoes, grapefruit, etc. The police were present and it is reported they did not attempt to interfere. Some valuable costumes were spoiled and the patriotic pageant completely demoralized. This was a "prank." The names of the pranksters were not published.

A few days ago, for reasons also best known to their adolescent selves, four girls at the National Training School for Girls, all from underprivileged environment, apparently could not resist the temptation to pitch some convenient plumbing fittings and rocks through a few windows. (That this is not an unusual performance, note vacant houses and business buildings all over this or any city, with every window smashed.)

However, at the National Training School for Girls, or at any other "correctional institution," such behavior is a riot. Police, newspaper reporters, photographers, hurry to the spot and sensational headlines appear and inaccurate accounts. For example (the press reports notwithstanding to the contrary), there were no windows broken in the superintendent's office; there was no "battling with the police;" there was no throwing of hot soup at anybody.

"How long, O Lord, how long" until the righteous will be "sporting" enough to give those whom they designate as bad a fair deal? "Equal justice under the law" is carved in imperishable stone over the door of the Supreme Court Building which looks out over the Washington alleys! When will the same ideal be the governing principle in the police courts?

Checks And Balances.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The doctrine of checks and balances is the very heart of our constitutional system. An objection has been frequently raised that such a system hampers progress. It only impedes action when proposals are advanced for the interests of a certain class at the expense of other groups. Whenever any program is offered for the good of the whole body politic the system works smoothly.

Absolute power is the same in its nature, whether it be exercised by a single executive, an aristocracy or by the people. The proletariat need a check to keep them within their proper bounds; the capitalists also need a check to bind them to their normal sphere. These checks are to be provided by the very powers that need to be checked. They are to check each other mutually by any two combining against the third.

In European governments the system of checks and balances was based upon the principle of checking the power of the monarch and the aristocracy. Hence these governments were not constituted to resist subversive mass movements like socialism and communism.

In the United States, on the contrary, the system of checks and balances interwoven in the Federal Constitution is founded on the principle of checking both minority and majority groups.

The distinctive American conception is that absolute power is not to be concentrated in any particular group, but it is to be decentralized and diffused throughout each class. Our Government is the only one in the world today capable of resisting subversive mob movements because it has the power to check the masses. It should be clear that as long as we adhere to this principle a Communist or Fascist dictatorship is impossible.

Because the United States is the home of freedom and is organized to resist the Marxian politico-economic philosophy it is hated among the nations of the earth. They would like nothing better than to create internal strife and wrangling within our borders. Therefore our domestic policy should be to harmonize the views and interests of the diverse social, economic, political and racial groups forming our Nation. United we can defeat the world, divided and fighting among ourselves we would soon become the prey of enemy nations. IVO de CAPET.

Just Grappling.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The American people, burdened with the unwarranted confusion, unjustly and unnecessarily thrust upon them, hampering the comeback of their best friend, their employer, after the depression has passed, are too busy trying to match pennies with the meat dealers and the dealers in all the necessities of life to give time to study the workings or purposes of individual brains. Unfortunately, they are confused, distressed and despondent, like the drowning man, just grappling. Unfortunately America has been too free for many who came here to enjoy her freedom, and they are now the very instruments slowly but effectively destroying the freedom which has made America the greatest of Nations and the home for real Americans.

Let us, too, beware that we do not confuse curiosity with ballyhoo and take on, as Dorothy Thompson writes, a defeatism attitude. No matter how desperate the situation may be the spirit of our forefathers, thank God, will bring us through this age of experimentation with its farcical impositions.

Dr. Graves' View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with much pleasure and high esteem the letter of Dr. Mortimer Graves which appeared in The Post of October 11. Being unquestionably one of the greatest authorities on the Far East in this country, Dr. Graves should have enlightened the mind of those who think that the Japanese militarists are now carrying on a mission of civilization in their ruthless slaughtering of thousands of the Chinese people.

He should have at least made Mr. Teddy de Nolasco feel ashamed of his notion as presented in his letter published earlier in The Post. No intelligent American will for a moment agree with the latter and consider the aggressor who is engaging in a campaign of conquest without just cause and without restraint in terms of civilized warfare a real friend of the people who are being daily butchered with bombs and poison gas.

Such a notion is not only incredible, but a gross insult to human intelligence and reasoning power. I have been wondering what the writer would do should this kind of "blessing in disguise" be bestowed upon him and his country.

"Not So Hot."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An editorial in The Post of October 7 refers to Roosevelt's reputation as a "great leader of mankind."

If the writer of this editorial refers to the swollen army of Federal pay-rollers and the army of farmers, WPA'ers, and others feeding off the United States Treasury, I agree that the President is, in their estimation, a wonderful leader. Otherwise his reputation is "not so hot," to use a slang expression.

It's Perry's Fault.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On July 7, 1853, Commodore Perry touched upon the Japanese Islands which few people thought much about at that time, at Kurihama in the Bay of Yeddo, in his Pacific Ocean adventures.

Like all persons who possess the itch for improving other people, or who are commanded to do it, he insisted with all the guns of his squadron that the Japanese people become progressive and renounce their careless isolation to become factors in the highly civilized world he knew about. Hitherto, that backward people had apparently been fairly content in their own conspicuous and lonely ways. But that failed to satisfy Perry. The results of this innocent little incident are apparent to everybody today.

Why, then, at this late day when Perry's efforts have so wonderfully succeeded, try to arrest the efforts of a formerly benighted people to become like the nations who reluctantly accept the white man's burden and sail hopefully across the seas to enforce a higher standard of living among people who never had thought of that and to convey to them the message about getting ahead in the world?

ARTHUR RICHMOND.
Washington, Oct. 9.

Overproduction?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The country is faced with a dreadful calamity! We are "suffering" an "overproduction" of cotton, corn, wheat and other food products. Could anything be more terrifying? In the days when men were uncivilized a large crop was prayed for and the gods thanked when it came. Today we hasten to call a special session of Congress to consider "crop control" or means to limit nature's productivity.

In spite of bumper crops of cotton and other products of the soil, I'll wager that prices of cotton goods and food will register no decrease.

What nature's bounty should mean, and would mean, in a really intelligent community, is widespread benefits and a lessening of the struggle for subsistence. But as long as the needs of humanity are considered as opportunity for profiteering the lemon will be squeezed till dry. The cost of living mounts rapidly in spite of technological advances and nature's bounty. This is due to a cock-eyed economic system—capitalism.

Embassy Picketing.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial on "Embassy Picketing" makes it very clear that the Government frowns on such practices. How long will they be allowed to go on?

When one witnesses one of these demonstrations, he is reminded of a pack of wild dogs barking at nothing. Are they sincere in their protests of killings and the spilling of blood? One asks why the Russian Embassy has never been the center of their barkings?

When they refuse to listen to decency and the requests of their Government, are these good citizens? And the impudence of practically telling the President to refuse the visit of a guest!

More editorials like these are needed to convince these professional barkers! ALFIO CARTA.

President On The Budget.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To us old-time pay-roll meeters and miracle disbelievers, the keenest note in the President's series of nonpolitical speeches to his Western friends was his budget balance promise, delivered with the least hint of a quaver. That is, until we recalled the caliber of past Presidential assurances on the same topic. Assurances have been too prolific and performance too minus.

We—at least those of us whose votes count the least—want action and performance, and respectfully submit that demand to Congress, whether met in special or regular session. HANK BREEN.

The Post Impressionist

An Author Looks At The Red Cross.

IT is one thing to be an outsider looking in at Red Cross activities and another to be on the inside and engaged in its work.

The recent drive for membership has brought me again into close touch with the Red Cross, and has revived many memories.

During the World War I was living in St. Louis. Before our country participated I had written a short story, "Made in Germany," which preached a little sermon about peace among nations. Later many of the Germans in St. Louis wanted this used as pacifist literature, but by that time my sympathies were actively with the allies. I went to Barnes Hospital as instructor in surgical dressings, and when the war was over became one of the Gray Ladies who visited Veterans' Hospital 92, several miles from St. Louis. Every Friday, no matter what the weather, our little group went into the wards to cheer if we could the boys who were shut in. As a writer I soon gathered about me all the men who wanted to do things in journalism or more serious literary work. I found much talent and great eagerness.

There was one boy, whom I shall call Stevens, very ill, rather cynical in his point of view, railing a bit at fate which had brought him from the idealism of fighting to preserve democracy to the dreariness of invalidism. He was of Welsh descent, born, in fact, in Wales, but had lived most of his life in America. He was full of poetry, but did not know how to express that which was within him. I gave him "The Oxford Book of Verse," "The Golden Treasury," a first edition of Edna St. Vincent Millay's early verses, and many other stimulating books. Never before had his mind had the food it wanted. He responded amazingly. When at last he was discharged from the hospital, although far from well, he took college courses, and is now living a full life, though handicapped by illness. His cynicism has been changed to a very healthy optimism. Without the work of the Red Cross this man might still be without the stimulus of intellectual interests.

* * * *

Another of my "specials" was Benson—and again I am using a fictitious name. After he had had a severe mastoid operation I was called to the hospital one Sunday of freezing cold and sleety roads. We arrived late, at the lonely time when the lights are low and the visitors have gone, and a funereal silence is over the halls. I had taken with me the rector of one of the St. Louis churches who was much interested in my boys, and then and there he received into the church this one who seemed so near death. I was made godmother, without any expectation that I would ever take on the duties of my office, for it seemed as if he could not live an hour. It was a scene I shall never forget—the dim room, the fragrance of the flowers I had brought, the still figure on the bed, with its bandaged head, the clear tones of the priest and the faint response. But Benson did not die. Some years later he married, and I am godmother to his two children. He has done editorial work, and while he has had much discouragement, what the Gray Ladies were able to give him in the hospital has, I believe, sustained him through many difficult crises.

* * * *

Another of my "specials" was Dillard—about whom I later wrote a short story, "So This Is Christmas." Dillard was, we were told, going blind. He could see a bit at close range, and there were spring days when, as I came into the ward, he would be ready with a bunch of wild violets which he had picked for me. It was always pathetic to think of those dim eyes searching for the little flowers. A specialist was called in and gave hope of recovery, but Dillard found it hard to believe that he would ever see again. He told me later he had felt that the surgeon was simply trying to keep him from despair. At last I interviewed the surgeon myself and I was told that Dillard would not be blind. I went at once to the hospital. I shall never forget the radiance of the poor boy's countenance when I made him believe that his world would not be dark. He loved the story I wrote about him, although much of it was fictionized.

On these Fridays at the hospital we learned of the work of another branch of the Red Cross—occupational therapy, which taught men to use their fingers and thus relieve the pressure of mental disturbance. It was always a cheerful thing to see them weaving or working with tools, and happy in their work.

I have written this little account of my own experiences because I know that many people think of the Red Cross as merely active in time of war. Its peacetime work goes on without great acclaim, but it is no less important and effective. We know, of course, what it has done to relieve distress in great disasters—floods, earthquakes and other catastrophes—and it is well to emphasize the fact that we have among us this great army of experts upon whom we may call, and that it is our annual memberships which make possible their great work for humanity. TEMPLE BAILEY.

Low Wages.

A MAN who identifies himself as an employe of the Home for Aged Carpenters, maintained by Mr. Bill Hutcheson's United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners at Lakeland, Fla., has sent your correspondent two communications.

One is a clipping from the Carpenter, the official journal of the brotherhood, indignantly denouncing as unbelievably low the wages paid florists and greenhouse employes in Denver. These people have been receiving from $10.80 to $12 for a week of from 54 to 72 hours, according to the Carpenter, which tossed off the editorial observation that other organized workers in many parts of the country have been the victims of similar conditions.

"It would be a good plan," says the Carpenter, "to make a record of these low wage business groups and throw it in the face of the chronic ballyhooers who insist on unloading on the public the false propaganda that unreasonably low wages do not exist in the United States."

• • • •

AT THIS POINT your correspondent's correspondent spits on his hands and goes to work on the subject of unreasonably low wages. First, he places himself in absolute agreement with the Carpenter's contention that such wages do exist, and next, although he identifies himself, he asks that his identity be kept confidential, because, miserable as the job is which he holds in the employ of a great and prosperous labor union, he needs the money nevertheless.

"I have been told that a dollar a day is starvation wages," your correspondent's correspondent says. "The inclosed article is written by Mr. Duffy, the general secretary of the union, and it dwells on the abominably low state of wages in one section of the country. Let me pause here, however, to state that our wages here at the home come through Mr. Duffy's office, and that, on the whole, we are paid much less and that our hours are equal to those mentioned in the article which he wrote."

Your correspondent's correspondent then states that in the kitchen department of the national home of this labor union the wages are $7 for a week of seven days which start at 6:30 in the morning and end at 7 in the evening. The hospital staff, he says, work in shifts owing to the necessity for a night side, but the working day averages nine and one-half hours and the wages range from $8 to $11. The general help work from 7:30 in the morning to 5 p. m. on week-days, so he reports, and put in three hours on Sunday mornings for $9 or $10 a week. The laundry hands are depicted as the aristocrats, for, although they are said to work from 7:30 to 5 in the afternoon, they do not work on Sunday and get a half-day off on Saturdays at wages of $8 a week. He does not say as much, but it seems only fair to assume that food and quarters are supplied, too.

• • • •

"ALL OVERTIME is donated," your correspondent's correspondent writes. "Vacations are rare, and there are no set meal hours—half the time you eat and run or run between bites. We tried to organize, led by the initiative of the kitchen help, within the Hotel and Restaurant Employe's International Alliance, which is affiliated with the A. F. of L., like the Carpenters and Joiners Brotherhood, but we did not get very far. There seems to have been some pressure exerted somewhere and our charter was never recognized.

"We are also puzzled by the fact that we are not included in the New Deal's old-age pension plan. Why not? This home is not connected with charity."

Your correspondent does not know why the employes of the National Home of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners are excluded from the benefits of the social security act. But probably it goes back to the enormous initiation fees and dues which are exacted from the nominally free American working men by a private and unofficial licensing authority. Congress may have reckoned that anyone employed in such an organization must be rich, like some of their labor leaders.

The Once Over

Father And Son Talks.

Popper.

What now?

My history teacher wants me to study Japan's reply to the League of Nations and write an essay.

The more you study it the funnier it will seem. Go out and ride your bicycle.

In the first paragraph Japan says the world misunderstands her.

Misunderstanding Japan is just a wrist motion.

The note says China is the aggressor and started everything by having an army in China.

That's just a starter. The next note will say China has an army in Japan.

• • • •

One paragraph says that a Chinese army of 40,000 men attempted to wipe out 30,000 nationals in the International Settlement, including women and children. When did that happen?

Nobody knows but Japan.

I thought that Japan had slaughtered those women and children and shown particular disregard for the Shanghai country.

So did I, my son, but we must have been wrong. Go out and practice football. My head aches.

• • • •

The note says, "China is responsible because she disregards the Japanese nonaggression policy and mobilizes troops against Japan." What does she mean by the Japanese nonaggression policy?"

That must have been put in for a laugh.

In another paragraph the note says, "The action of Japan is a measure of defense to which she has been driven by the provocative acts of China." What were the provocative acts, popper?

One of 'em was that the Chinese wanted to run China. I hear the boy next door whistling for you.

What was the other one?

The Chinese didn't welcome subjugation.

Is that a provocative act, popper?

It is to the Japanese.

• • • •

The note also says, "The action of Japanese troops is in self-defense. Japan has no other intention whatever." Did you read that, popper?

I read it four times.

Why?

Because I still thought it must be eye trouble.

In the last paragraph the Japanese note says, "Japanese action in China violates no treaty. China, not Japan, is breaking a war pact and menacing world peace." Did you read that far?

I only got halfway through when I threw down the paper and turned in on Charlie McCarthy.

Why Charlie McCarthy?

He's just as funny and now and then he says something that makes sense. Scat!

And have you ever noticed that the homelier a girl is the more she goes for the grotesque millinery?

• • • •

The day when the milliners turned out a hat and said, "This, my dear, will make you look attractive," have gone. They now pull something out of the case that looks like a combination mitten, laundry bag and telephone cover and chirp, "You'll love this; it makes you seem like something out of the comic papers."

• • • •

Don't they use mirrors any more? Or are they paying off election bets?

• • • •

This department's millinery research bureau reports that the girls not only accept the new styles, they insist on them.

London Letter

With Parliament In Recess, Britain Knows Little Of Diplomats' Negotiations; Tempers Rising Against Japan.

By David Wills.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

FOR WEEKS London has been stagnant. Parliament is still on vacation, Cabinet members have been fishing, shooting, or baby-kissing in their departmental circuits, Labor Party organizers have been touting for new members with unknown success. News has come of trade-agreement discussion in Washington, of a Nyon conference, of debates at Geneva, of checks and counter-checks between Britain and Italy, of war in the Far East and of the tortuous endeavors of Geneva to stay alive but do nothing. British representatives have been playing a dominant part in the external maneuvers, but with what object it has been very difficult to discover in London. England with Parliament in recess is governed by a dictatorship, responsible to nobody.

Out of the normal fog of European diplomacy there suddenly emerged a recognizable shape with clear outlines—the Nyon agreement to prevent piracy in the Mediterranean. But the fog thickened again as the day approached for Mussolini to go to Hitler.

It is supposed that what Mussolini wants from Germany is assurance of support in the Mediterranean so that he can continue his campaign in Spain. Germany, when she is in the mood, does not want to antagonize Britain, and may not agree to give as much support to Mussolini as he wants.

In order to increase his bargaining power with Hitler, Mussolini made a play to show that he, too, could be friends with Britain and France whenever it suited him. The trick served its day. Mussolini has been to Berlin, and whether he got what he wanted or not, the immediate urgency to play ball with the French and British is past. And so his talk of withdrawing his army has been toned down; nobody seems to know what he offered and nobody believes him whatever it was. But the French from lack of guts, and the British from lack of conviction, have weakened their stand so much that it is plausible to suppose that another Hoare-Laval deal is in the cards.

Franco-British Weakness Demonstrated At Geneva.

THAT THE backbone has gone from the British and French is demonstrated by the behavior at Geneva. The Spanish government delegate demanded that the League should do its duty, should recognize Italian aggression in Spain and condemn it, should restore to the Spanish government its right to obtain arms and munitions from abroad. It is highly probably that if this is not done, the Negrin-Del Vavo government now controlling Valencia will be overthrown by a more extreme government under Caballero.

The Russian and Mexican representatives alone supported the Spanish demand, which is legally and morally undisputable. The French made timid threats that unless the Italians withdrew, the non-intervention scheme might be doomed. And Walter Elliot, for the British government, made a lamentable speech which said that non-intervention, with all its faults had in fact worked to keep war away from the rest of Europe, and that it should not be jeopardized. There was not the slightest evidence in the speech to suggest that either Britain or France were determined to apply pressure on Italy to force her to obey the non-intervention pact, which is now an open farce.

The French want the Spanish government to win, the Italians to withdraw, but are afraid to do anything drastic without full British support. The British government's actions can be made to make sense if it is seeking a compromise solution of the whole problem along something like these lines:

Withdrawal of Italy from Spain, Germany from the Mediterranean, but a victory for Franco. A four-power pact between Germany, Italy, France and Britain. An end to all obligations under the League concerning sanctions. A strong enough navy for Britain to protect trade routes from any possible Italian threat. Germany and Italy to content themselves with slight concession on raw materials instead of any return of colonies, except possibly at the expense of some smaller nations. And a British recognition of Italian rule over Abyssinia, demonstrated by a substantial loan to be floated in London for Italy.

Presumed British Aim Compromises All Issues.

THIS SCHEME is the product either of stern realism, or of cowardly insanity. It successfully compromises all issues, whether economic, strategic or moral. And quite evidently it is incompatible with the principles of the League, which are about all that remain of that organization. This incompatibility is recognized, and the British are trying to have as many problems as possible discussed by committees and conferences unassociated with the League and away from Geneva. The result is that pro-League sentiment is more stultified than ever. On the European situation alone it would probably be impossible for any opposition to arise among the British people, particularly since diplomacy is now conducted as secretly as possible.

But an entirely new situation has been created by the course of the war in China. As Japan bombs civilians, dynamites universities, sinks fishing craft, attempts to break the morale of the Chinese by full-blooded frightfulness, the indignation of the British public is rising. Some realize that what happens in China today is the logical outcome of what we and the League failed to do over Manchuria in 1931. Far more realize that what happens today in China may happen to us in Europe tomorrow. If a protest is not made now, it can never be made, and Europe may lie down in the grave it has dug for itself. And so protest is rising in intensity—a spontaneous move is spreading to boycott Japanese goods. The urge for re-expression of faith in and physical support for standards of international morality has found a new focus.

But there are very great difficulties ahead of the movement. If protest is confined to bombing of civilians, we appear to condone the act of aggression which is the original cause of the trouble. We accept war as an instrument of policy but protest when war breaks the rules of reasonable conduct, which is logically absurd, since war is unreasonable in the first case. Moreover it is inconsistent since we are ourselves preparing to wage precisely the same kind of war when the occasion arises. War is a method of economic organization in which the civilian is equally important with the soldier, and equally a target for attack. Germany was defeated in the last European war more by starvation of civilians than by any other single cause. The protest against Japanese action cannot stop short at bombing of civilians.

Invocation Of Covenant Would Mark End Of League.

YET HOW can it proceed further? For the logical step is to demand a verdict of aggression against Japan by the League, and if that step is once taken in full formality the League members are required to proceed to sanctions. The League members do not want to apply sanctions, and are afraid that if they do they may invite an attack by Japan from which they cannot defend themselves.

The demand for full implementing of the League Covenant would lead therefore only to a contemptible collapse of the League. Further, full play for the Covenant might force the American Government to recognize a state of war in China and to implement the neutrality act. And America is not likely to apply sanctions since she does not seem willing to defend her ships and property against Japanese interference. Thus the official procedure might lead not to condemnation of Japan and support for China, but to a collapse of the rudimentary powers which yet remain to the League.

It seems most profitable, therefore, to proceed in a piecemeal manner, in a series of independent steps. First comes a condemnation of bombing of non-combatants; this has already been made by the League. Second, the League may define Japanese action as aggression, without setting in motion the automatic obligation to proceed to sanctions. There might instead be merely a general instruction to some standing committee to search out ways of making the League opinion effective, an instruction with which the committee might delay considerably. In the meantime public opinion in individual countries might be at work to boycott Japanese trade on moral grounds, an action which would find interested support from commercial firms which suffer from Japanese competition. The pressure of this opinion might lead individual governments to support the Chinese cause by keeping open a supply of munitions, and even by simultaneous if not co-operative action to keep essential supplies from reaching Japan.

There would be a logical justice in the pursuit of this method.

Hand-To-Mouth

By Barnet Nover

Policy Of Improvisation.

THE CONFUSION into which Great Britain and France have been thrown as a result of Mussolini's flat refusal to consider the immediate withdrawal of the Italian expeditionary force now in Spain may last a short time or may be prolonged. That will depend on circumstances that no man can foresee. But the situation reveals again how thoroughly committed those powers are at the present time to a hand-to-mouth policy in foreign affairs.

Both Great Britain and France know precisely what they are after. They want peace. They want an easing of the intolerable tensions which have kept them and the rest of the world on tenterhooks. They want an international situation in which it would become possible to reduce the mountainous burden of armaments. And they are and for some time have been prepared to make very considerable concessions to achieve these great and wholly desirable objectives.

How to achieve these objectives is, however, something else again. Rarely has there been any complete harmony between the British and French governments. Each in turn has fluctuated very widely in its own course as between one month and the next. And always there have been a great many unknown inhibiting actions, such as what the United States would do or refuse to do.

• • • •

THIS POLICY of improvisation has been neither wholly bad nor wholly good. It has given British and French statesmen occasional opportunities to take advantage of temporary circumstances to achieve permanent gains. They did this at Nyon, where the piracy problem was made the occasion for the establishment of a Mediterranean and particularly of an Anglo-French naval alliance certain to affect the balance of power in the Middle Sea for a long time to come.

They did it earlier when the Belgian demand for a restoration of her prewar neutrality led to the creation of what has since been revealed as an Anglo-French military alliance. But, at the same time, this policy of improvisation has had definitely disastrous results.

The nonintervention agreement concerning Spain was one such occasion. For by revealing to the Fascist dictators their readiness to treat an insurgent movement on a par with a regularly constituted regime, so as to prolong an uncertain state of peace, Great Britain and France helped establish a very evil precedent and opened the door to endless difficulties.

They are now paying for their original caution by having to cope with the Spanish problem all over again and under difficulties far greater than those which faced them at the outset.

• • • •

THE NONINTERVENTION agreement was, in fact, a sort of pain-killer which for a while eased a hurt, but did not and could not of itself cure the disease of which the pain was only the symptom. On the contrary, the palliative of nonintervention only permitted the disease to spread. Thus Great Britain and France now find themselves in a position where, if Europe's festering sore is to be healed, desperate remedies must be applied.

Clearly neither London nor Paris would like to resort to any extremes. But with each passing day inaction becomes more dangerous. Yet having embarked on a policy of improvisation they find it necessary to continue along the same course, hoping that sooner or later before the inevitable showdown something will turn up.

Possibly something will. Miracles occur even in the world of nations. But there is no certainty of it. And in the meantime every moment of delay may mean the transformation of an evil situation into a desperate and hopeless one.

• • • •

IT HAPPENS to be very easy to blame Great Britain and France for the dilemma in which they now find themselves. But this dilemma is by no means confined to those nations alone. It is a dilemma which all peace-loving nations face in a world where some governments are prepared to employ the threat of war and, if necessary, the instrumentality of war, to achieve certain ends.

So far as the United States is concerned, we have hitherto sought to get around the dilemma by ignoring its existence. We have regarded war as something for the nations of Europe and Asia and Africa to worry about while we could by a process of self-hypnosis and the mumbo-jumbo of neutrality legislation proceed along the even tenor of our way.

It was an illusion. But like other beliefs which rest on no foundation it was particularly difficult to destroy. And its destruction is certain to be a painful process—like all education. This is illustrated by the fact that one speech by the President indicating our concern in the world situation and the necessity of co-operative action by us with the other peace-loving nations for the purpose of preserving peace has been enough to let loose an avalanche of war fears.

• • • •

WE, TOO, want peace. We, too, favor an easing of present international tensions. We, too, would be very much relieved if the present burden of armaments could be reduced. But hitherto we have been unwilling to do very much about it. We, too, have been pursuing a policy of improvisation.

The world and the times are much too confusing to make possible the working out in advance of a carefully co-ordinated policy of action either by ourselves alone or by this Nation in co-operation with other powers. There will always be unseen developments that must be considered and acted upon as they arise.

Nonetheless, thought must be given to what so clearly does lie ahead and, within broad limits, a program of action must be worked out. That is the lesson so clearly indicated to Great Britain and France from their own unfortunate experiences of the past few years. That is the lesson which we, too, find it impossible any longer to avoid.

Micawber-like, the democratic nations have hoped that something would turn up to make it unnecessary for them to face the dour realities of a world in which international anarchy is on the increase.

That hope has now all but evaporated. The problem of establishing world peace through common action can no longer safely be evaded or ignored. This does not mean that desperate devices must be employed. Far from it. But the realities must nevertheless be faced. And the basic reality is that if the peace-loving nations, like the struggling American colonies of the eighteenth century, do not hang together they will hang separately.

Whittier

By William Lyon Phelps

His Place As Poet.

I received a letter from a gentleman some weeks ago who wished me to answer certain stated questions, for the benefit of a friend in Europe. Here are his questions and my answers:

1. Where does Whittier stand among American poets today? He is a major American poet. Emerson, Poe, Whitman are ranked above him, but he could not possibly be called a minor poet.

2. Is he taught in schools?

Yes; he is taught nearly everywhere in American schools; in the readers, and in separate courses.

• • • •

3. Is he honored as one of the SIX (say) outstanding religious poets of all ages?

Certainly not; though I don't know who the six are; but at this moment of writing think of Dante.

4. One British lover of Whittier thinks he ranks with Herbert, Vaughan, Quarles.

In a certain sense this is true; Whittier is actually more popular in America than are those three in Great Britain. He is assuredly a greater poet than Quarles; but he never reached such a height of grandeur as Vaughan in "They Are All Gone."

• • • •

5. Is he held as a shining jewel among American classics?

If I understand this question, yes; as a hymn-writer, first-rate.

6. Comparisons of Whittier with Coventry Patmore and Father Tabb.

He would stand up well with them, but not with Francis Thompson.

Tom McCarthy

Life On The Fire Department's Rescue Squad.

FIREMEN NOT only have time to be philosophic, at the station on Twelfth street northwest, which houses No. 2 Engine Company, and the Rescue Squad, but they have things to be philosophic about. They not only find life in the "rough," "raw" or what you will, but they find it darn perplexing.

TOM McCARTHY.

For example, among the problems of the rescue squad are numbered such tasks as removing 350-pound ladies who falling in a faint, have been wedged between the bathroom wall and the bathtub. That, it seemed to me was a problem of no small proportion. It took the firemen of the rescue squad 45 minutes to effect that release, which feat, I felt, warranted a place beside such immortal "figurer-outers" as Archimedes and Newton.

"Of course, it's not as tough as it used to be," Lieut. A. C. Kefauver told me. "Time was when we were making 300 runs a month. We took anything and everything . . . from drownings to maternity cases."

"Tell him about the fainting soldier," Private J. H. Reed said.

"Well, that was a case of where we were giving too much service," the lieutenant said. "—entirely too much service."

"We used to get a call a couple of times a week, and we'd speed out with our ambulance and pick up this fellow who'd once been a soldier. He was always having a fit, or was just on the point of having one. We never thought there was anything particularly 'phoney' about it until we discovered what was happening after we got him to the hospital.

"When I have these spells Dr. X always gives me a dose of ——,' the fainting soldier said. 'Nobody took any particular notice of this peculiarity until we began to bring him in a couple of times a week —and he always mentioned that the doctor gave him this certain drug. Then, when we investigated we discovered that he was using us just for the ride. He threw the fits just to get the drug."

• • • •

"THAT WASN'T as bad though as the case of the man who chased the rat," Private Clark said.

"That was the real McCoy all right," the lieutenant agreed, "even though you might wonder why a man would be risking his life to chase a rat."

I asked them what the risk was in chasing a rat, and they assured me that there was no particular risk in chasing a rat in the open, but when you began rat hunting in the narrow space between a room ceiling and the roof, there were likely to be dire consequences.

"This Movie House manager," said the lieutenant, "became aware that a rat had died some place between the ceiling and the roof."

As a matter of fact the lieutenant didn't express himself quite that delicately, but it amounted to the same thing.

"And, so," he continued, "this fellow climbed up into the space between the roof and the ceiling, and went looking for the rat. As he crawled along in the passageway it became narrower and narrower, hotter and hotter, and the rat became . . .

"Well," said the lieutenant, "you can get the idea. He passed out."

"We got him down by cutting a hole in the ceiling just beside the place where he had passed out," one of the privates said.

• • • •

LIFE ON the fire department's rescue squad isn't quite as turbulent now as it was a few years ago. Then, as the lieutenant pointed out, they used to answer every conceivable type of emergency call. Now, they leave some of those jobs for the police, and the hospitals in whose jurisdiction they more logically fall. However, even with a curtailed line of duty they find it necessary to answer upward of 80 calls a month.

The fire rescue squad at Enginehouse, No. 2, has ten men on duty, both on the morning and evening shifts. All of these men, trained by the Red Cross to give first aid, are prepared for almost every conceivable emergency. They answer all two-alarm fires. And the resuscitation of victims of electric shock, asphyxiation or near drowning is their particular province.

The squad ambulance carries such items as gas masks and inhalators, first-aid kits and stretchers. However, the red letter cases have called more for ingenuity than they have for first aid

• • • •

"WE'VE HAD our problems getting children's feet out of water traps, rescuing cats and dogs from high places and reviving gas victims," said Lieut. Kefauver, "but the case of Elmer was in a class by itself. I think he'd be there yet if it hadn't been for Baumbach."

Baumbach, it appeared, was really the hero of the entire affair of Elmer.

"Elmer was a colored boy who took his job too seriously," the lieutenant said. "When he lost it, he decided that life just wasn't worth living. But Elmer wasn't the man for a speedy death. He just lay down to die.

• • • •

"HE CLIMBED into the space between the ceiling and the roof and waited for death."

"But we got there first," Private Reed said.

"I still don't think we'd have got him down if it hadn't been for Baumbach," the lieutenant said. "The passageway was too narrow for us to climb in and drag him out, and we just didn't know what to do.

"We coaxed him. We pleaded with him. But there was just no moving Elmer. We even threatened him, but Elmer had climbed in to die, and he just wasn't coming down.

"Baumbach almost knocked himself out doing it, but it worked better than the entire rescue squad and the police.

"Baumbach got a hook into the ceiling. He was going to pull the ceiling down, so we could get in and bring Elmer out. That might have worked all right, but Baumbach found a much quicker method.

"When he pulled back on his ceiling hook, he slipped. He fell back against the door with a crash. His ceiling hook slammed down on his aluminum hat, and a couple of yards of plaster came off the ceiling with a roar. I think Baumbach let out a roar, too.

"While he was picking himself up, pushing his aluminum hat above his ears and digging plaster out of his eyes, we saw a pair of legs dangling from the trapdoor in the ceiling. Elmer was coming down.

Baumbach, with his hat, his plaster and his roar had been just too much for Elmer. He thought that maybe the world was coming to an end, and that he could postpone dying for a little while anyway."

Text of Roosevelt Address at Poughkeepsie

By the Associated Press.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Oct 13.—The text of President Roosevelt's address today, in a speech at the cornerstone laying ceremonies for Poughkeepsie's new postoffice, follows:

I have come today, not in an official capacity, not to make a speech, but as one of your neighbors to take part in your celebration.

Before I say anything about the history of Poughkeepsie, let me straighten out this matter of my being an architect.

I think the easiest way to put it is this: If, when this new postoffice is completed and the murals are in place and you good people of Poughkeepsie have had a chance to look at it, day after day, if, then, you like it, I will take all the credit in the world. But, if you don't like it when it is finished, why, I had nothing to do with it whatsoever.

Owning Saves Money.

As a matter of fact, what the Secretary of the Treasury has said to you about Government architecture is well worth further study. The Government every year builds a great many buildings in order to conduct Government business more efficiently. The principal criterion for putting up a new building is, of course, need. The second is, economy. It probably is better, in most cases, for the Government to own a building than to rent a building. It saves money in the long run.

All over the United States there are scattered the most terrible monstrosities of architecture, perpetrated by the Government on the people of the United States. To be sure, many of them were built during an unfortunate period of art, but in these latter years we think that we have returned to the simpler forms, returned to practical architecture, which at the same time has beauty.

And during these past four or five years, partly because of the situation of unemployment in the Nation, we have been enabled to bring into the Government service many, many people who otherwise might have been out doing private work. To them much credit is due for the improvement of the architecture of all Federal buildings in every county and every State of the United States.

City Once Was Capital.

Poughkeepsie is to be congratulated not only on its past but also on its future on this 250th anniversary of its founding. This city has a memorable history, a history that is concerned with the development of our earliest American civilization, a history that goes back to the days when the first white people came to the Hudson River on this side, in this section, and began tilling the soil, began putting up mills on the banks of the river, began organizing a county form of government.

As a community it became of sufficient importance by the time of the Revolution to become for a period the capital of the State of New York. It had become of sufficient importance in 1788 to be the scene of the convention called to pass on the ratification of the Federal Constitution. Only two blocks from here that convention met in the little old courthouse.

I have wished much that we knew more about that convention 149 years ago. We do know of the terrific struggle that went on between the Clintonians and the Hamiltonians, how, for many weeks, it looked as if New York State would fail to ratify the Federal Constitution. We know also that if New York had failed to ratify, this Union of ours would have been in the difficult predicament of having about half of its members, the New England States, separated from the other half of its members by the State of New York, not a member. That is why it was such a matter of importance. The deadlock, as most of you know, was over the question of whether the Constitution should be ratified in the absence of a bill of rights. The people, even in those days were talking about freedom of religion and freedom of the press, just as they are rightly doing it today, and the Clintonian faction insisted that the Constitution should not be ratified because it had no bill of rights in it. The Hamiltonian faction, to which incidentally, my great grand-father belonged as a member of the convention, said that it did not make much difference. It took leadership on the part of the Duchess County delegates to suggest a compromise, the compromise that the State of New York should ratify the Federal Constitution in full faith and confidence that the bill of rights would be put in at the earliest possible moment. That is how we New Yorkers came to be a part of the Union, that is one reason why, at the first opportunity, a bill of rights was put in.

Street Was Extended.

And then, after the organization of the Federal Government, years passed and this county, this part of the river, became the great granary of New York City. If you will go back in the history of Poughkeepsie to about the middle of the last century, you will find references to what you and I would call "booms." Mills were started up in different parts of the county. Organizations were being formed to build railroads into various parts of the county, and in the early 70's, a group of citizens talked about the first bridge over the Hudson River. Most of those plans were fulfilled.

Very few of us are old enough to remember those days, but most of us who are here can remember, not long ago, a couple of decades, a little more than that perhaps, one of our neighbors who had a vision. He had a vision about what we call "New Market street." And we can remember the congestion of traffic down there at Main and Market streets before this extension was built. In those early days Mr. James Monroe, whom we ought to honor, and do honor today, planned the opening up of Market street extension. The result of the opening up of this street gave him the vision, back in those days, that at the end of the street, with a vista extending over many blocks, there should be some beautiful buildings, well erected and a credit to the city.

And so, though he is gone, his dream is coming true today, and at the head of New Market street there will be what I hope you will say is an architectural gem.

Yes, I am glad to be here with my neighbors on this 250th anniversary of the founding of Poughkeepsie in the 150th year of the signing of the Constitution of the United States. I think always of Dutchess County and its county seat as a very close part of my life. And, although I am temporarily resident elsewhere, I get back here, as you know, just as often as public business will let me and I am going to keep on coming back and being your neighbor.

Missent Letter Caused Slaying Of U. S. Consul

Beirut, Syria, Oct. 13 (AP).—Meguerdich Karayan, held for the slaying of United States Consul General James Theodore Marriner, learned today the latter may have been the victim of a tragic mistake.

He was told that Marriner had approved his re-entry into the United States, but that the approval had gone astray in the mails because of Karayan's change in address.

Police said Karayan admitted slaying Marriner yesterday because he believed the consul had refused to grant him re-entry permission. Karayan, 29, lived in the United States for a time prior to 1934, when he returned to this country.

Marriner's body will be sent from here Tuesday for burial in the United States.

Dr. Pool Will Discuss Palestine Separation

Dr. David de Sola Pool, rabbi of the Portuguese Synagogue, New York City, will discuss the proposed partition of Palestine before the national forum of the Jewish Community, Sixteenth and Q streets northwest at 8:15 p. m. Sunday. The lecture is open to the public.

Rabbi Pool recently returned from Palestine where he studied the attitude of the Jews and the Arabs in regard to the Palestine partion. Isidore Hershfield of the Center's educational committee will preside.

Opera Group to Stage 'The Barber of Seville'

Encouraged by the 3,500 attendance at their initial presentation of popular-priced opera, that of "Rigoletto" Tuesday night at Constitution Hall, the Washington Popular Opera Association announced yesterday that "The Barber of Seville" would be given in Constitution Hall November 22.

A. Conti Berenguer, general manager and president of the association, said the organization planned to present eight or ten operas this season at intervals of four or five weeks.

Greek Comedy Foremost Bill For Next Week

Lunt and Fontanne Bring 'Amphitryon' to Town to Vie With Films.

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontaine will be seen at the National Theater next week in the Theater Guild's long awaited production of "Amphitryon 38," adapted to the English-speaking stage by S. N. Nehrman from Jean Giraudoux' original. "Amphitryon 38," relating to Jupiter's visit to the earth and wooing a happily married woman, in its present version, first was presented in Paris in 1929. The settings have been designed by Lee Simonson, who also performed the same service for Flaubert's "Mme. Bovary." In the supporting cast will be seen Edith King, Richard Whorf, Sydney Greenstreet, Alan Hewitt, Barry Thomson and George Meader, among others.

"The Life of Emile Zola," hailed as one of the greatest motion pictures ever made, will be presented for the first time in Washington at popular prices at the Earle Theater next week, beginning tomorrow, with Paul Muni in the role of the great French writer. Directed by William Dieterle, this subject boasts an impressive cast in support of the star, including Joseph Schildkraut, as Capt. Dreyfus; Gale Sondergaard, Gloria Holden and Erin O'Brien Moore. On the stage, Carmela Ponselle, noted mezzo-soprano, will headline the vaudeville bill.

Irene Dunne and Randolph Scott, supported by Elizabeth Patterson, Charles Bickford, Raymond Walburn, Alan Hale, Lucien Littlefield, Dorothy Lamour, Ben Blue, Akim Tamiroff, William Frawley and scores more, will be pictured on the screen at Loew's Capital Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in Paramount's production of "High, Wide and Handsome.'" The story concerns the early days of the oil industry in western Pennsylvania and the fight for control of the fields that was waged between the native farmers and outside money interests.

At RKO-Keith's Theater next week, beginning tomorrow, the major screen attraction will be "Breakfast for Two," in which the principal roles are taken by Barbara Stanwyck and Herbert Marshall, supported by Glenda Farrell and Eric Blore. This is described as one of the gayest comedies of the season. As a companion offering will be shown "Hollywood Screen Test," in which is made clear what experiences an aspirant for screen honors must go through to "get in the movies."

"This Way, Please," a new musical film play, will be the chief feature of the bill at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, with Charles "Buddy" Rogers and Betty Grable heading the cast. Also among those in prominent roles are Fibber McGee and Molly, Porter Hall, Cecil Cunningham, Lee Bowman and Mary Livingstone (Mrs. Jack Benny), who makes her screen debut in this subject.

Again departing from its usual policy of revival films, the Little Theater next week, beginning Sunday, will present a first-run screen attraction in "The Wandering Jew," in which Conrad Veidt is starred. A spectacular film version of E. Temple Thurston's famous stage success, this subject has won unstinted critical praise in other American cities. Marie Ney, Peggy Ashcroft, Joan Maude and Ann Gray play the four feminine roles of outstanding importance.

So great has been public response to "The Bride Wore Red," that Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone and Robert Young will be continued for a second week, beginning tomorrow, at Loew's Palace Theater in this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production. They are given superlative support by Billie Burke, Reginald Owen, Lynn Carver, Mary Phillips, Frank Puglia, Paul Porcasi and numerous others. The short-reel subsidiaries also will be continued.

"Ice Floe," a story of adventure in the Arctic under command of Commander Donald B. MacMillan, will comprise the major short feature of the bill announced for the new week, beginning tomorrow at the Trans-Lux Theater. Another important subject on the new bill will be "Swing, Monkey, Swing." These will be augmented by the customary world newsreel coverage and cartoon comedies.

Samuel Goldwyn's faithful picturization of Sidney Kingsley's gripping melodrama of "Dead End" will continue its downtown popularity as chief feature of the screen bill at Loew's Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The principal roles are played by Sylvia Sidney and Joel McCrea, with Humphrey Bogart, Wendy Barrie, Allen Jenkins and the original youngsters from the New York stage production. The regular quota of short reels will complete the bill.

The Washington Civic Theater's first production of the current season, the sprightly comedy, "Excursion," not heretofore seen in the Capital, will be presented in the Wardman Park Theater beginning on Wednesday night of next week.

Two newcomers will star in the new musical extravaganza to be presented at the Gayety Theater for the week beginning with the usual matinee performance next Sunday. The feminine lead will be played by Valeria Parks, said to be one of the most stunning beauties ever seen on Ninth street; the comedy lead by Bob Ferguson. They will be assisted by a large cast of comedians, singers and dancers and a beauty chorus.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

The Ticklish Business of International Espionage Forms Basis of 'Lancer Spy,' New Screen Thriller

Twentieth Century-Fox Introduces New Romantic Hero in George Sanders, Husky Newcomer; Duke of Windsor Not for Film Industry; About Miss Greenwood; Civic Tickets on Sale; Al Shean Steps Out; Notes of the Theater and Its People.

BELL.

WHEN "Lancer Spy" takes possession of the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater—as it will, according to present plans, following the engagement of "High, Wide and Handsome," which begins tomorrow—theatergoers will see a picture of a vintage that dates back almost 20 years to the days of the Great War, but one which, in view of the present upset condition of the world, takes on immediate and potent interest.

"Lancer Spy" is a picture of international espionage that garbs itself in all of the sensationalism and thrilling habiliments of the old-time "spy picture" that flourished when the Western front was beginning to waver and German submarines were blasting the world's troop ships and mercantile bottoms more or less off the high seas and depositing them on the floor of the ocean. Under the direction of Gregory Ratoff, more generally known as a character actor with a tremendous dialect, this Twentieth Century-Fox production loses no time in the minute detailing of its exciting plot. It deals only with the salient highlights of its story and leaves a good many of the essentials of the narrative to the spectator's imagination. If one watches closely, there are telltale revelations, now and again, of precisely what is going on in the matter of double spying and scrambled identities.

It is in this manner that several of the foremost "names" in the cast are utilized to telling but slightly obscured effect. This is especially true in the case of Peter Lorre, who seems to be wasted as an underling in the service of the high command in Berlin—until he is recognized also as the sly little fellow who furnishes the masquerading British agent No. 33 with his most needed disguises and enables him to escape across the German border into Switzerland. And George Sanders, heretofore cast in comparatively minor roles, steps out as a romantic hero of the first order in an assignment that is something more than merely dual. It is at least triplex and if the total film footage of "Lancer Spy" had not been drastically reduced in the cutting-room would have been quadruple. That is a fair sized job for any actor, even a good one.

And this George Sanders, emphatically, is a good one. He may be most quickly identified as the robust young man who was the vindictive and unconscionable cad of a husband in "Lloyds of London," or the monocled husky, stripped to the waist and billowing with ominous muscle, in the mutiny scenes of "Slave Ship." Anyhow, Mr. Sanders comes to bat in the title role of this one with two strikes on virtually every other member of the cast as a player of authority and a surprising degree of versatility.

This is not to say that the remainder of the cast falls short of high competence. Lionel Atwill, Sigfried Rumann, Maurice Moscovich, Dolores Del Rio, Frank Reicher, Joseph Schildkraut and the rest challenge Sanders' preeminence at more than one point in the story—especially Rumann and Schildkraut.

Sigfried Rumann was introduced to American audiences with Ethel Barrymore and later was seen with Katharine Cornell in "Alien Corn." He also appeared on the stage in "Grand Hotel." Schildkraut is experiencing a considerable renaissance in the celluloids these past few months. His most notable work recently is in the role of Capt. Dreyfus, with Paul Muni in "The Life of Emile Zola," opening at popular prices at the Earle tomorrow. His comedy contribution to "Lancer Spy," in the role of Prince Ferdi Zu Schwarzwald, a remote burlesque of a certain royal personage under the old regime in Germany, closely crowds his more serious work in "Zola" in excellence. If you didn't see "Zola" at the National, then Schildkraut was the African slave dealer in "Slave Ship," with Warenr Baxter and Wallace Berry. His last local stage appearance, it seems to me, was with Eva Le Gallienne at the National, and his best work with her in "Liliom."

So, until the time comes, perhaps it will be possible to patch together a vague sort of notion that "Lancer Spy" is a pretentiously and efficiently executed film play. Yesterday afternoon, at the preview, it elicited more "ahs," "ohs" and "yippees" than anything that has been unfurled before the drama desks in months. The boys and girls were popping off every minute or two. And they are supposed to be a hard-berled audience.

• • • •

A brief and conclusive bulletin comes to this desk as follows: "Asked regarding a report that the Duke of Windsor would be employed by the American motion picure industry, Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., said, 'There is no basis for the report.'"

And that seems to be that—as virtually all of the well informed were sure it would be.

• • • •

Due to the unusual interest being shown in Elisabeth Bergner's film version of "As You Like It," being screened as chief feature of the current week at the Little Theater, the management has arranged to admit elementary, high school and parochial school students to any performance at a flat charge of 20 cents.

English and dramatic classes throughout the Capital have been apprised of the reduced-price plan and special study guides have been sent to those requesting them. Others desiring them presumably may secure these interpretative aids upon request—but the time is short.

• • • •

Al Spink, one of the theater's veteran stentors, is visiting Washington this week to spread the news that Charlotte Greenwood will bring a pretty nifty little comedy-drama, as the saying goes, to the National in "Leaning on Letty," the week of October 25. Prominent in her cast will be Romaine Callender, long a favorite of the old National Theater Players. Perhaps even more important is the announcement, already made in this space, that Miss Greenwood will augment her regular performance by offering a group of her inimitable songs and dances following the fall of the final curtain on the play proper. This present-day innovation harks back to the distant era of Al Jolson's supremacy in Shubert musical comedies and revues, when, on at least one occasion, he supplemented his regular performance at the Belasco by adding a song recital after the last curtain. The late Melville Ellis accompanied Al at the piano in a considerable list of standard songs and ballads that gave his "home town" perhaps its first inkling that Jolson was a real singer as well as a great blackface comic. Miss Greenwood, however, will offer songs strictly "in character." In character, that is, with the sort of thing she, also, used to do at the Winter Garden—such as stepping over upright pianos and doing funny things with those long arms. More fun!

Edith King, who has the role of Queen Leda in the Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne production of "Amphitryon 38," coming to the National Monday night, appeared with the Lunts also in "The Taming of the Shrew," in which she was the widow. She recently played the leading feminine role in Delos Chappell's production of "Cross Ruff" and last season had an important role in the musical comdey, "Frederika." Just in case you had forgotten.

Delos Chappell, by the way, announces that "Father Malachy's Miracle," the Brian Doherty adaptation of Bruce Marshall's novel with Al Shean in the role of the wise and gentle little priest, definitely will open in New York on Wednesday night, November 10. The play now is in rehearsal, under the direction of Worthington Miner. This is a bit of a departure for the comedian who helped popularize "Oh, Mr. Gallagher, Oh, Mr. Shean" in the Ziegfeld "Follies" a few years back. But the silvering Mr. Shean is by way of being a bit of an actor, too.

Tickets now are on sale for the season's first production of the Washington Civic Theater—"Excursion" is the item in question—and may be secured in the lobby of the Raleigh Hotel, or by calling DI. 1600—just to head off this persistent jingling of the phone bell. "Excursion" will be presented in the Wardman Park Theater, beginning next Wednesday night.

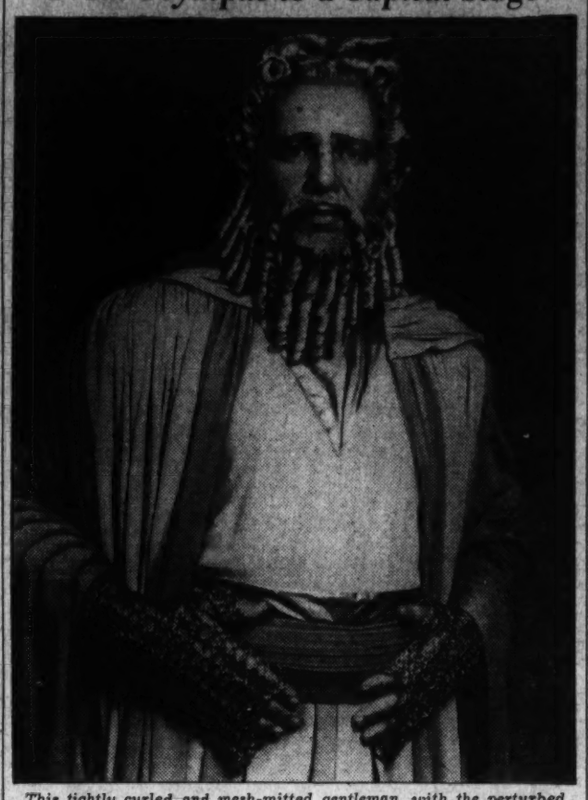
What's-in-a-Name Note.

It isn't so unfortunate as you might think that the title of "Lancer Spy" sounds so identically like "Lancer's Pie." It was anything but that for him, although it leaves about the same taste in the mouth.

From Olympus to a Capital Stage



This tightly curled and mesh-mitted gentleman, with the perturbed look in his eyes, is none other than that gay dog, Jupiter, king of all the gods who perch on high Olympus, come to earth to woo the human Alkmena, model of marital fidelity. The god, of course, actually is Alfred Lunt and the object of his ardor, Lynn Fontanne. All of which will be amusingly disclosed in Giraudoux's "Amphitryon 38," opening at the National Theater next Monday night as second of the season's Guild subscription plays.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Oct. 13. — Settin' Around (Paramount): Well, folks, you can tape up your ribs and stand by for laughs. The keynote of Hollywood's production plans for the new season is comedy—the more insane, the better. At least, that is the forecast outlined to me today by Paramount's production chief, William Le Baron. "With the whole world in a crazy turmoil," he pointed out, "peoples' nerves are too taut to stand the strain of serious drama." War is already under way in the Orient, Europe is on the verge of war and here in the United States, labor troubles and political dissension have everyone on edge. We think that audiences want to laugh—and we're going to give them more comedy than we have ever turned out in any past year. So 1938, like 1917, 1918 and 1919, will see the rise of many new comedy stars."

MAE WEST.

The list of pictures now awaiting release, in production and scheduled, bears out Le Baron's prediction. It is a race to see which studio can turn out the dizziest screen fare. Today, at Paramount, out of seven pictures shooting, four are comedy specials, two are historical spectacles and only one deals with modern drama. "We don't decide what type of pictures we are going to favor," Le Baron told me, the public makes that decision. We get their verdict from our exhibitors and the order just now is for more laughs. Guess you can't expect people to worry about their personal troubles all day— and then go to a theater at night to worry about the troubles of someone else."

Talked with Mae West on the "Everyday's a Holiday" set and asked her if her new picture would have as many risque lines as her others. "I never use risque lines," she announced. "If you will analyze my speeches, you'll see that the words are not nearly as risque as those you hear in most pictures. It's the way I say them that makes them seem risque. I've been capitalizing on that for years. Look, I'll show you what I mean—you give me the first sentence that pops into your mind." "Try 'It's a nice day,'" I suggested. Mae began to slither. She looked at me with that langorous, half-lidded expression of her and purred: "It's . . . a NICE . . . day." And if I were a censor and heard her say anything as suggestive as that on the screen, I'd ban the picture!

Set-watched W. C. Fields, who is starring in "The Big Broadcast of 1938" and went away convinced that it is more entertaining to watch him working in front of the cameras than it is to see him on the screen. He is the prize ad-libber in studio history. High-salaried dialogue writers work for weeks concocting his "lines," and he pays no attention whatever to the script. Today he was working in a golfing sequence and, after taking about 20 strokes in a sand trap was supposed to say, "I was killing a snake!"

Instead, when he finally climbed out of the trap, he announced bombastically, "I was attacked by a covey of scorpions and while I was fighting them off, a flying wombat got into my shoes!" The other actors, caught by surprise, howled—and the scene had to be re-shot. But they retained Field's speech—just as they will use every other ad-libbed gag that he creates.

Artist Defends Nude Women in District Mural

Says Collier Is 'Loose in Approach' to Stage Coach Scene.

By the Associated Press.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Oct. 13.—Three nude white women in an Indian stage coach raid mural may be "the craziest thing" to Indian Commissioner John Collier, but they're still satisfactory to the man who painted them into the Wild West scene.

Artist Frank Mechau explained he didn't "bear down on history" too much in his murals in the Washington (D. C.) Postoffice Building. However, he pointed out, Collier might know his Redskins and still be on less sure ground in the fields of art analysis and history.

Last week the Indian commissioner took a look at the mural and announced:

"The craziest thing I ever saw."

Today Mechau replied:

"I can easily translate the remark to read in my favor. It seems to me the Commissioner of Indian Affairs has been somewhat loose in his approach."

Only Roughly Handled.

The mural, entitled "Dangers of the Mail," was interpreted by Collier to depict Indians scalping the nude women after pillaging a stage coach.

Mechau took a different view. "They are only being roughly handled," he said.

"No artist ever cared or wished to be considered an archeologist or ethnologist," the Colorado-born painter explained. "My intention was to create an imaginative reconstruction of a massacre into a pattern of forms simplified and arranged and intensified into plastic inevitability.

Superficial Approach.

"As for Mr. Collier's comments themselves, they are a perfect example of superficial approach, but even taken into their own field of historical fact, they still cannot stand up.

"The plausibility of the three nudes being taken captive is backed up by the Bureau of American Ethnology, which stated in a publication that Indians west of the Mississippi made a practice of taking white women alive.

"It seems extraordinary that Mr. Collier, undoubtedly familiar with the history of Indian warfare and massacres, should take exception to such a mild scene as the denuding of white women captives. Were I to bear down on history, the actual figure of a massacre would be gruesome indeed."

Woodson Again Heads N. E. Boundary Citizens

The Northeast Boundary Citizens Association Tuesday re-elected H. D. Woodson, president, and Z. F. Ramsaur, secretary. Other officers elected were Mrs. Charles Morris, assistant secretary; Mrs. V. L. Bundy financial secretary; Mrs. Eugene Maveritte, treasurer, and the Rev. C. S. Jones, chaplain.

The committee on public utilities reported it had received assurance from the Capitol Traction Co. that its cars with lengthwise seats would be replaced this month. Flood relief along Watts Run was discussed.

Mrs. Sheely Is Sponsor Of Destroyer Mayramp

Mrs. E. E. Sheely, of Gulfport, Miss., has been designated sponsor of the destroyer Mayramp, which will be launched February 1 at the Boston Navy Yard, Secretary Swanson announced Tuesday.

The ship has been named in honor of her great-great-great grandfather, Capt. John Mayramp, who as a midshipman, led the boarders in a fight between the Bon Homme Richard and the Serapis September 23, 1779. The Mayramp, second destroyer to bear the name, was authorized in 1934. Its predecessor was sold for scrap two years ago.

Job Placement Gain of 18.7% Recorded Here

19,612 Persons Given Work in First 9 Months of 1937.

An increase of 18.7 per cent in job placements in private industry made by the District of Columbia Employment Center in the first nine months of this year as compared with a similar period of 1936, was reported yesterday by C. E. Lamson, director of the center. A total of 19,612 persons were placed in private jobs in 1937, an increase of 3,096 over the number so placed in the first nine months of last year.

There were 1,920 commercial and professional employes placed by the center in 1937, an increase of 55.1 per cent over last year. This group showed the largest gain in placements. The hotel and restaurant employes group also recorded a substantial gain in placements, with 2,114 persons in new jobs, an increase of 21.5 per cent over the first nine months of last year.

A sharp decline in Government public works' placements, which started in January, 1937, continued in the succeeding eight months, the report stated. These placements dropped from 7,352 in 1936 to 2,243, a decrease of 69.9 per cent. This was attributed to the curtailment of Government public works' activities.

A greater percentage of women were placed in private industry than men. Women numbered 12,274, or 62.6 per cent of those placed in jobs in 1937. This was due primarily to the large volume of job orders received for domestic and service employes.

A decrease of 3,696 in the total number of new applicants registering was also reported, indicating an increasing number of men and women are being employed in private industry. The center now has 28,866 applications on file as compared with 33,440 a year ago.

D.C. Burglar Wins Right to Plead For His Release

Covington, Ky., Oct. 13 (AP).—William E. Bedell, convicted Washington burglar, nearing the end of a five-year maximum term in Federal prison at Milan, Mich., won today the right to plead personally before the Sixth United States Circuit Court of Appeals in his effort to gain immediate freedom.

The court issued a writ of habeas corpus, returnable forthwith, commanding Bedell be brought here in accordance with a request he telephoned to attaches.

Bedell, convicted in Washington in 1932, contended in a similar writ, previously denied, that his three-to-five-year term expired some time ago and that he is being detained unlawfully. Baltimore authorities have forwarded a detainer for his arrest on another burglary charge.

Reich Rotarians Dissolve Clubs

Chicago, Oct. 13 (AP).—The secretariat of Rotary International tonight announced disbandment of the 42 clubs in Germany and the one in the Free City of Danzig. The secretariat said the action was "in line with the considered judgment of the German Rotarians with regard to their obligations as good citizens of their country."

Dissolution of the German clubs began in Berlin August 31, after the Nazi high command started a campaign against them because they did not conform to national socialism.

Tolerance Urged For Non-Catholics

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—A Catholic bishop from a Southern diocese today voiced a plea for tolerance toward non-Catholics, especially those "linked with secret societies," who have shown bigotry or discrimination toward Catholics in the past.

The Most Rev. William V. Hafey, formerly of the Diocese of Raleigh, N. C., and now Coadjutor Bishop of Scranton, Pa., spoke at a meeting of the New York assembly of the Catholic Daughters of America.

"Around about you are thousands of persons who are not members of our church and who perhaps were victims linked with secret societies," he said. "For God's sake let us forget it and remember that they, too, have souls. The day has come when we Catholics have got to change our tactics. We will get results only when we sit down with those people around a table, realize that they are our brothers and sisters and treat them as human beings."

Bishop Hafey said he was not thinking of the controversy over former Ku Klux Klan membership of Supreme Court Justice Black.

Modern Life Puts Strain on Eyesight

Our ancestors literally were more farsighted than modern Americans, Dr. Edwin H. Silver, Washington optometrist, told the Parent-Teacher Association of the Thomas Nelson Page School at Ballston, Va., Tuesday. This, he explained, was because early man had little artificial light and used his eyes largely over long distances

With the appearance of modern artificial light and increased reading, Dr. Silver said, people were forced to adjust their sight to nearer objects. Constant improvement in artificial lighting, he said, brought more study and greater eye strain, "which is why people wear glasses today."

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. Mildred Cologne, president of the association.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Admits Slaying by Ax, Man, 67, Receives Life

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 13 (AP).—General Washington Hackney, 67-year-old ax slayer, was sentenced to life imprisonment today by Judge Alvin Barnhardt after he pleaded guilty to first-degree murder. Hackney was charged with the slaying of his son-in-law, Carl Cobb, last August 10. Hackney told police Cobb threatened him with an ice pick.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Cruel, High-Tempered, Irritable Boy of 11 Called 'Problem Child' by Family; How to Help Him?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a very unusual problem for you. I have a nephew, 11 years old, who is very much a problem child—cruel, intensely irritable and with a violent, uncontrollable temper. He is second in a family of five children and his mother is sickly and nervous. The situation has become so serious that his mother (who is my sister) and I fear that he may perpetrate some crime if not soon placed in a strict school or corrective institution.

* * * *

The mother has appealed to me for guidance. Her financial condition is rather poor, but she may be able to pay $20 per month for his maintenance and education, and furnish his clothing. But what school or institution can she send him to? They live in a nearby State, so I feel it would be useless to approach any District institutions or authorities. Any advice you can give us will be deeply appreciated. Yours truly,

D. A. R.

* * * *

DEAR D. A. R.: If I knew the State in which the family resides, I could give more specific suggestions. Under the circumstances, I recommend that you contact Mrs. Ruth Christopher, in-take secretary for the District of Columbia Welfare Division, recite your story as told here, supplying the name of the State, and have her tell you the nearest agency which would handle the case. Telephone her at NAtional 8000, the District Building.

* * * *

I have spoken with a representative of the local Child Welfare Division about your problem, and am told it is customary in such cases for a trained worker from the proper agency to consult with the parents, study the home situation, and wherever possible to correct the difficulty without removing the child from the family circle.

It is hardly possible that the boy is wilfully and entirely at fault. If the truth were known, he may be, fundamentally, as sickly and nervous as his mother. He may need physical and nervous rehabilitation. It may be a case of defective eyesight, bad tonsils, etc., on the one hand, or, on the other hand, a total lack of basic rapport between himself and other members of the family.

* * * *

He may be, potentially, a really gifted child whose home environment is not providing him needed opportunities for wholesome self-expression. His intense irritability, uncontrollable temper and apparent viciousness may be symptomatic of social and emotional frustration. He may need more parental praise, love and appreciation than he is getting; greater and gentler understanding; opportunities for doing things, which would give him a chance to excel, to gain merit in his own and others' eyes.

* * * *

In any event, a trained social worker who is permitted to study the home situation should soon determine the root cause of the boy's unhappy conduct and, with the family's full co-operation, inaugurate a program designed to set it right.

M. H.

* * * *

Loves Married Man.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I feel you can help me with my difficult problem. I am in love with a married man who is the father of two children. He loves me, too. He and his wife have been separated for eight years, but she will not give him a divorce. His children don't like me because they are jealous and doggedly faithful to their mothers.

* * * *

Help me in this way: Tell me whether or not I should give up this very dear friend, which would break my heart; or whether I should try to make his wife see how wrong she is not giving him a divorce. It is very urgent that you advise me at once. Thank you so much.

D. E. C.

Poor Matrimonial Prospect.

DEAR D. E. C.: In my opinion, it is not for you to take the aggressive in severing whatever ties still bind this husband and wife together. If the man wants his freedom, it is his responsibility to ask for it and to see that he gets it. It is my opinion, furthermore, that if he loves you as much as you love him—as much, shall we say, as you think he does—he would assume that responsibility without any prompting from you.

* * * *

Confronted with a dilemma of this sort, a man of real character, moral courage and unmixed motives, who sincerely loved another woman than the wife with whom he had not lived for eight years, would shield the name of the woman he loved while doing everything in his power to obtain a divorce. If he discovered divorce was out of the question, or was of necessity to be a sordid matter of public allegation and counter-allegation, he would be frank in telling the "other woman" so. Then, if the latter was willing to risk scandalous gossip in order to have him, he might consent to fight his wife to the last ditch for the right to remarry.

* * * *

But when a man hedges, as this man is hedging, to the extent that you feel called upon to decide in your own mind whether to give him up or go begging alms of his wife, so to speak, I think you may well conclude he is worth neither your time nor the sacrifice of your pride. He is neither a dear friend nor a sincerely intentioned suitor who would suspend you in such uncertainty.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Your Figure, Madame!

Girlish Lines Preserved in Later Life by Exercising.

By Ida Jean Kain.

WOMEN used to be old at 30. Now they are young at 40, because they are on guard against the middle-aged figure. The difference between the youthful and the matronly figure is largely a matter of suppleness and well-toned muscles. Nowhere is muscular control more necessary than in the middle of the figure—the waistline and the abdomen.

From the standpoint of health as well as the figure, the muscles of the abdomen are among the most important in the body. When toned and strong, they give proper support to the vital organs, and furthermore, prevent the excessive deposit of fatty tissue which is prone to occur in this region.

The muscles forming the abdominal girdle are brought into action to some extent in all vigorous gymnastics, active sports, specialized dancing, skating and hiking. Go in for these activities and you will keep your figure young. Unfortunately, as the average woman grows older, she is less and less inclined to activity. As a consequence, the muscles lose their youthful firmness—and she loses her figure.

Calisthenics Helpful.

As a substitute for physical activity through sports or dancing most of us turn—eventually—to calisthenics. It is true that a few minutes of concentrated, specific exercise is as effective in many respects as hours of general activity, but the specific exercise must be chosen carefully.

Many of the calisthenics which are are supposed to strengthen the abdominal muscles are, in reality, back exercises. Keep in mind that the abdominals are not muscles of the hip joint, and that they assist only incidentally in movements which raise the thigh toward the chest, either in lying or standing position.

Analyzing the muscular action of bringing the flexed knee toward the chest while lying on the back, we find that until the thigh is vertical the action is almost entirely on the muscles of the lower back, the psoas and iliacus. The abdominals are not involved until the final stage of the movement, when the knee is brought to the chest. To avoid unnecessary exercise or undue strain of the back muscles, begin your abdominal exercise with the knee in a flexed position, or with the leg elevated about 18 inches from the floor.

Creeping Exercises.

On the other hand, leg-raising exercises in which the knee is held straight tonically contract the abdominal muscles. One of the most effective of these exercises is simply to lie flat on the back on the floor and raise alternate feet a few inches. Do not completely lower either foot during the exercise. For more vigorous exercise, raise both legs simultaneously, hold for a few seconds, and slowly lower to floor. Creeping exercises are excellent for the abdominal muscles, since in this position the abdominal wall is reflexly contracted.

The following exercise tones the abdominal muscles and, at the same time, slim the hips:

POSITION—Down all all fours, hands and feet.

MOVEMENT—Walk like a cat stretching itself. Move one hand and foot forward, while the other hand remains stationary and the corresponding foot is stretched backward, high in air, the knee straightening in the movement.

Keep your muscular girdle firm.

Personality Teacher Demonstrates Poise

Recognizing the importance of putting your best foot forward in seeking a job, Mrs. Lyle Campbell, personality instructor, demonstrates to her class the correct way to walk and stand. She is assisted by one of her pupils, Miss Lydia Bartz, of 1420 M street northwest.

Use of Inner Resources Held Key to Building Personality

Mrs. Lyle Campbell, Y. W. C. A. Teacher, Advises Women to Analyze Their Type and Develop Qualities of Most Appeal.

By Genevieve Reynolds.

IF YOU WOULD HAVE an attractive and successful personality, here are two simple rules to follow. First, look in, then look out. Look in to determine your inner resources and analyze your type. Look out to express effectively to others the beauty and richness of your thought.

This formula is given by Mrs. Lyle Campbell, who is teaching a class in personality development at the Y. W. C. A. each Monday night.

Contrary to many personality advisers, Mrs. Campbell does not believe in changing your natural type. Don't ape anyone, she advises, but develop your own personality to the superlative degree of excellency.

"Sincerity is an important factor in an arresting personality and imitation soon manifests itself subconsciously," she said.

To the person who asks," What is my true personality?" Mrs. Campbell replies, "It is you at your best."

She refuted the theory that when a woman blows up intermittently her critics are justified in saying, "Oh! that's the real person coming out!"—The real person, Mrs. Campbell maintains, is that woman when she is at her best—not in her few outbursts of weakness.

Helped Many Women.

"Often an erroneous statement is made by someone to the effect that some woman has no personality whatever," said Mrs. Campbell. "Every woman has a very definite personality either negative, aloof, commanding, arresting or disagreeable. It is how she affects us that we judge her."

To the question, "What is personality?" Mrs. Campbell replies: "In simple terms, personality refers to the way we affect other people. It differs from character in that character represents what we really are—our integrated selves. First we must realize that the only kind of personality that is worth cultivating is the constant silent radiation that emanates from a truly fine character, and we must remember that this kind of personality is deeper than a surface quality."

Through a wide experience as instructor in speech arts at Washington University College, director of Better Speech Institute of St. Louis and a member of the educational staff of the Y. W. C. A.'s in St. Louis and Washington, D. C., Mrs. Campbell has been instrumental in helping many men and women to bring out their best points.

Her class in personality development at the local Y. W. C. A., which is composed largely of business women, is devoted particularly to bringing out latent talents that will insure greater success in the business and social world.

In determining the importance of personality to success, Mrs. Campbell interviewed 20 outstanding leaders in various professions. She found that 75 per cent of those who had reached the top in their professions attributed it to their ability to get along pleasantly with other people.

Poise an Element.

The elements that go to make up an attractive and successful personality, according to Mrs. Campbell, are: Poise, the ability to get along with other people, the power to think clearly, ambition, good sportsmanship, an active and cordial interest in other people, the ability to master situation and never admit defeat, a sense of humor and imagination.

She defines poise as "the outward expression of an inner balance." This includes the ability to maintain an impersonal attitude under criticism and to meet emergencies as though you expected them to arise, then take up the interrupted task as though you had never been disturbed.

"Under the present system," Mr. Campbell said, "I believe it is impossible to carry on a piece of work to a successful conclusion without finding ourselves at times working under tremendous pressure. Our problem, then, is to learn to work at the terrific speed required without doing ourselves lasting harm and to do our work gracefully and graciously."

Good sportsmanship she explained in this way. "Adopt an adult point of view toward obligations and responsibilities. Good sportsmanship means absolute fairness, not to expect favors because you are a woman, nor resort to tears because you are hurt."

Scoring Test Given.

One of the first steps of Mrs. Campbell's pupils is to analyze and score themselves. Following are 12 points each for scoring character and personality, according to Mrs. Campbell's charts:

Character: Honesty, integrity, honor, courage, fortitude, loyalty, will power, purposeful mind, generosity, self-control, unselfishness, sense of proportion.

Personality: Ability to make a good first impression, a gracious and pleasant manner, a pleasing appearance in dress posture and facial expression, poise, social mindedness, enthusiasm, speech, intelligence, alertness, sense of humor, a positive quality as charm, efficiency or sociability, qualities of leadership.

To score yourself on character or personality, use this method: Ten if quality is outstanding, five if fair, three if undeveloped, two if deficient. The possible maximum score is 120 and the minimum is 50.

A favorable first impression will depend largely upon how you react to the following questions and situations, according to Mrs. Campbell.

"Do you like to meet people?

Which contacts do you enjoy most, those made with people, books, or things?

When you meet strangers is your manner ill at ease, indifferent, over pleasant, cordial, detached, shy?

When you meet strangers are you conscious of your dress, appearance, speech, surroundings, shortcomings (real or fancied), at ease in any situation?

When you meet celebrities do you become inarticulate, affected, embarrassed, halting in speech or entirely comfortable?

When you meet others are your introductions gracious, hesitating, indifferent, indistinct, awkward or finished?"

Today's HEALTH TALK

Useful Action of Drugs.

The practice of mixing drugs to heal the ills of the human body and mind is as old as mankind. And they are still a part of the scheme of things. New drugs are constantly being discovered: new uses for old ones are being uncovered—some old ones are discarded.

How the useful action of drugs was discovered was in the past largely accidental. In modern times, with so much research in the pharmacological laboratories all over the world, it is more likely to be the result of deliberate research.

One of our drugs was a disease of plants which sometimes used to affect man. It is a rot, or rust, on rye and other grains, and it was known as a spoiler of flour. Before its effects were traced to the proper cause, people used to eat this spoiled grain or flour with terrible results. Epidemics of ergotism swept over Europe time and again in the Middle Ages. The drug causes a contraction of the blood vessels, especially in the extremities, and gangrene of a leg or arm was common.

This very property of contracting blood vessels, however, was what put ergot into the list of useful drugs. Because it was found that it contracted the blood vessels of the uterus, so that it could be used to control hemorrhage after childbirth. In 1774, Parmentier, a Parisian apothecary, published a letter from a Madame Dupille, of Chaumont, stating that she had frequently used a thimbleful of ergot to hasten childbirth, and in 1807, Dr. John Straus, of Waterford, N. Y., recommended it for the same purpose. It is no longer used in that way, but it does stop troublesome bleeding by the mother after the baby is delivered.

Another drug which has a long history in medicine is belladonna. It was once called mandragora, and was used to produce sleep, even as an anesthetic before surgical operations. "The Scots," says an old chronicle, "mixed a quantity of the juice of these berries with the drink which by their truce they were to supply to the Danes, which so intoxicated them that the Scots killed the greater part of them while they were asleep."

It was used in old times as a love philtre, and called belladonna because it makes a woman's eyes so beautiful and sparkling. Perhaps the name came from the fact that under its influence one called up such alluring visions.

Today its use in medicine is largely in eye work in the form of atropine.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Oct. 13.

WE MAY not have the pungent and delightful whiff of burning leaves in our streets to remind us to take off the fly-screens and dig out the snow shovel, but we do have our signs of the approach of sterner times. One is the arrival of roly-poly Elsa Maxwell, queen of party-planners for the set with more cash than imagination. The other is the formal opening, at a fancy night club, of Mr. Dwight Fiske, a bald entertainer who sings risky little ditties which have sometimes as many as four meanings, one spandy-clean.

ALICE HUGHES.

Both these world-shaking, epochal events have now taken place for 1937. We can now get out our woolens. The smarter sort of autumn is upon us.

Elsa comes back this year on the wings of success and with money in her reticule. Her life-story is appearing in Harper's Bazaar, she is headed for the microphone and the lecture-rostrum, which had better be good and sturdy. Elsa, in fact, is in the blue chips at last, and may not have to spend so much time amusing dithering herds of the soppier socialites. Smart woman, Elsa.

* * * *

And dear Dwight's opening took place at the Savoy-Plaza, and of course, darling, simply everyone was there—dressed-up little pitchers with big ears to catch all Brother Fiske's little cafe chanteys. Such local bellwethers as Ina Claire the Indomitable, Margaret Bannerman, of the Lunnon stage; Marion Tiffany Saportas, Bernice Chrysler Garbisch, of the motor dynasty—and scores more—all on hand to greet the nude-skulled king of our classier night life.

Elsa and Dwight are here, so I'm afraid everything is going to be all right with those night-drifters from the correct side of the railroad tracks!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I am to be a cohostess at an unusual dinner party tomorrow night at the dear old Cafe Lafayette. A dozen of us boys and girls who once worked for Kenneth Collins, noted store advertising director here, are hurling him a party to celebrate the tenth anniversary of his becoming a big shot in that field. I, a reporter, am the lowliest of the lot, which includes girls who are now ad directors on their own, after studying with Ken. Among them are Helen Law, Kathleen Grealish, Margaret Fishback and an especially brilliant copy-writer named Bernice Fitzgibbon. We look forward to a jolly reunion with ye ole boss.

* * * *

Bernice, by the way, just thought up a good line to boost her store's sales of bulbs and seeds for fall planting. The big ad was topped by the line, "Woman's Place Is in the Loam." And this in New York, with practically no loam visible anywhere!

* * * *

Louise Paine Benjamin, handsome and able beauty editor of Ladies' Home Journal, will soon have a book on the counters called "Why Men Like Us." Now, Louise, there's a subject! How many volumes in your work—or is it all on one page? Opinions would vary on this point!

Rid Yourselves Of 3 Age Signs To Keep Youth

Careful Attention to Eyes, Throat and Nose Will Aid Facial Beauty.

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

THERE ARE three age signs that will give away the secret of your birthdays or make you look older than your actual age, if not guarded against in a consistent fashion. These age broadcasters are the throat, eyes and nose, according to Miss Jane Hunt, a representative of the Dorothy Gray Salon, who is in Washington this week.

"As the years go by," said Miss Hunt, "the fine skin about the eyes loses some of its softening oils and tiny lines appear. This is exaggerated by eyestrain, sun and wind, and if lubrication is not applied to counteract this deficiency, the lines become further and further etched, resulting in crow's feet. Eye cream should not only be applied at night to lubricate while sleeping, but put on over eyeshadow during the day to give a dewy appearance."

The second part of the face to protect from the ravages of time is the throat, Miss Hunt explained. Here flabbiness, relaxed contours and double chins detract from facial beauty. What can be done about this? Her advice is to nourish with rich creams, stimulate with patting, and firm and strengthen the muscles with the following exercise: Throw the head chestward and then backward, next turn the head from side to side, and finish with a rotary motion of the head. These simple exercises should be done about 15 times night and morning. Chin straps, tied on under the chin and up over the head, after first applying throat cream, are also advocated by Miss Hunt, to give a woman of any age a swan-like throat.

In the nose, it is the enlarged pores which are the detriment. Sometimes they spoil the beauty of the entire face, maintains Miss Hunt. To guard against this, cleansing is of paramount importance—cleansing cream, followed by tonics or astringents, in accordance with the individual skin problem. Masks, believes this cosmetician, are becoming more and more popular with women everywhere, as they see the results obtained from them. For erasing that tired look, as a facial pick-up after a day at the office, traveling, or shopping, a good mask can work wonders.

A foundation of some kind should always precede make-up, according to Miss Hunt, a cream if the skin is dry and a liquid if the skin is oily. If the skin is a combination of oiliness and dryness, then use the two different foundations applied as the two types dictate. Cream rouge is better than the compact version, both as to appearance and its effect on the skin texture, according to Miss Hunt. She is also a strong advocate for lighter-toned powders for winter, natural-looking rouge and deep red lipstick as harmonizing better with current trends in clothes than darker tones.

D. C. Little Social Season Will Open This Week-End

Jean Webster's Romantic Comedy, 'Daddy Longlegs,' at National Theater Will Usher in Adventures for Younger Set.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

While dowagers and debutantes are enjoying the usual round of dinners, dances, luncheons and teas this fall and winter, Washington's youngest social set also will have its whirl at dancing school, art, music and students' concerts, with a dash of sports now and then for good measure.

HOPE R. MILLER.

"The little season" gets under way this week-end when the Children's Theater of New York presents Jean Webster's romantic comedy, "Daddy Longlegs," at the National Theater. You and I may have forgotten many things about what we liked back in our skip-to-school days, but "Daddy Longlegs" is one story most of us hope will be crystal clear in our minds as long as we live.

It seems only a couple of years ago (though I know it's at least 15) I saw Mary Pickford and Warner Baxter in the screen version. I remember I sat through it three times and then hurried home to read the book all over again. No telling what would have happened if I could have seen it done to life by the Children's Theater of New York.

The progress of this institution, incidentally, can be traced in any number of ways, but chiefly through the steadily increasing interest it has elicited not only from children but from "prominent parents" who have sponsored it from the beginning. To them and to the high standard of drama maintained from season to season goes the credit for developing a theater that now has four professional companies, each producing six plays, which will tour 160 cities this season under the auspices of outstanding educational, civic and cultural associations.

Mrs. Roosevelt Continuous Patron

In case you've forgotten, the Children's Theater had an unpretentious beginning in Claire Tree Major's drama school in New York. An established Shakespearean actress, Miss Major inaugurated children's theatricals on Saturday mornings in connection with her regular course, and soon discovered this phase of work was of distinctive and wide appeal.

The Children's Theater, as a professional enterprise, speedily followed, with one of its first and most enthusiastic patrons Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, whose husband was then Governor of New York. At almost every presentation Mrs. Roosevelt and two or three of her children were present. Later, when the drama project branched out to other cities, including the Capital, Mrs. Roosevelt continued to be an active patron. Six years ago, when it was becoming established here, she frequently attended the plays with her grandchildren, "Sistie" and "Buzzie" Dall. In more recent years she has continued to attend with other of her grandchildren or with children of her friends.

Former First Lady Also Supporter

Another active supporter during the five Washington seasons of the Childrens Theater has been Mrs. William Howard Taft, who has often been present at the plays alone—except at Christmas when she has made a practice of exchanging her ticket for a box in order to have a party of children with her.

Among other patrons for this, the sixth Capital season, are a number who have helped to make the Children's Theater one of the most important assets of the city. Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, jr., have been particularly stanch supporters, not only attending the plays themselves but in many instances providing tickets for children who could not be there otherwise.

Others who have given highly valued support are Mr. and Mrs. P. Landon Banfield, Mrs. Christian Heinrich, sr., Mrs. Reginald Huidekoper, Hans Kindler, Georgette Roose Howard, Mrs. John C. Letts, Mrs. James Alexander Lyon, Miss Louise Maret, Miss Marthe Maret, Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller, Representative Mary T. Norton, Mrs. Armistead Peter 3rd, Mrs. ZeBarney Phillips, Mrs. Higginson Rogers, Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler, Mrs. John H. Wilkins, Miss Bess Savis Schreiner, Mrs. John T. Vance, jr., and Percy Crosby.

Miss Laughlin's Marriage Set For October 23

Miss Gertrude Laughlin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Laughlin, has completed plans for her wedding Saturday, October 23, to Lieut. Hubert Chanler. The bridesmaids will be Miss Anne Eustis, daughter of Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis; Miss Helen Davis, daughter of Mrs. Dwight F. Davis; Miss Carlina Sheridan, who has come from California for the wedding and is stopping with her grandmother, Mrs. Philip H. Sheridan, and Miss Margaret Pickman, of Boston. Sarah and Ann White, nieces of Lieut. Chanler, and daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence White, will serve as flower girls.

Theodore Chanler will be his brother's best man, and the ushers will be Ernest Iselin, jr., of New York, Miss Laughlin's cousin; Lawrence Terry, a cousin of the bridegroom; Lieut. A. D. Clark, Lieut. John Cady, Lieut. E. S. Pearce, U. S. N.; Maj. Clyde Hartsel and Capt. C. C. Brown, U. S. Marine Corps.

• • • •

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol have as their guests for a few days Mr. and Mrs. Samuel R. Browne, of Coronado, Calif., who are being widely entertained.

Mr. and Mrs. Browne will go from here to their home in California.

• • • •

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Phyllis Morgan, daughter of Mrs. M. F. Morgan, of Lonaconing, Md., to Dr. John V. Gazzola, of Tarrytown and New York.

The former Miss Morgan is a graduate of the University of Maryland and Columbia University. Dr. Gazzola, son of Anthony Gazzola, Tarrytown, N. Y., is a member of the New York Post Graduate Hospital staff.

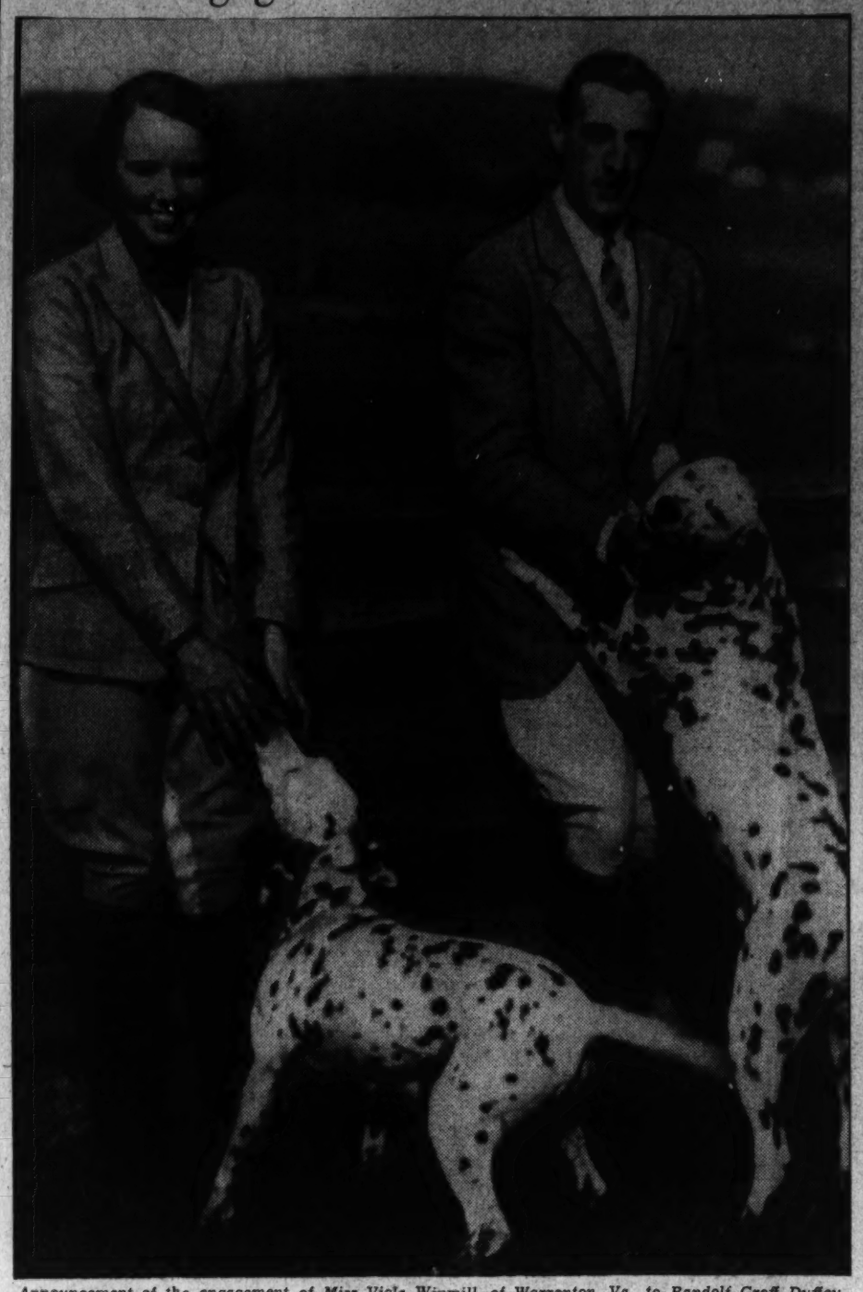
Round of Parties Planned for Visit Of Signora Rosso

Signora Augusto Rosso, wife of the Italian Ambassador to Moscow, arrived in Washington late yesterday afternoon and is at the Mayflower.

She will be here until Friday night, leaving then for Durham, N. C., to spend the week-end with her daughter, Adele, who is attending Duke University.

Signora Rosso's many friends here will be glad to know, however, that she will return to Washington Monday and will be here until Thursday. A number of social events have been planned in her honor.

Their Engagement of Wide Interest in East



Announcement of the engagement of Miss Viola Winmill, of Warrenton, Va., to Randolf Groff Duffey, of Middleburg, Va., is of wide interest not only in the Virginia hunting country but in Washington and throughout the East. The bride-to-be, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Winmill, is noted for her skill at riding and hunting with the Warrenton, Middleburg and Piedmont packs, and Mr. Duffey is acknowleged as one of the finest horsemen in this country. Both are members of the Virginians Club of the resort colony.

Mrs. Stapleton Back in Capital

Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton and her daughter, Miss Stellita Stapleton, have returned to Washington after spending the spring and summer in Europe, and are staying with Miss Stapleton's aunt, Mrs. Mae Hamilton, in her apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue until their home here is ready for occupancy.

The Stapletons went to England last April to attend the coronation, and during their stay were entertained by Lady Mallet, Sir Ronald Ross, and Lord and Lady Arundale, whom they visited at their castle. They attended the Irish races one day as guests of the President of the Irish Free State, Eamon de Valera.

During a brief stay in Paris Mrs. Stapleton and her daughter were entertained by the former French Ambassador and Mme. de Laboulaye. Their daughter, Mlle. Marie Therese de Laboulaye, will be married tomorrow to Christian de Margerie, and the wedding will be followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents in Paris. M. de Margerie placed first in his recent examinations for the French diplomatic service and has been assigned to the Embassy in Rome for his initial post. Since his future bride is a close friend of Miss Beatrice Phillips, daughter of our Ambassador to Italy and Mrs. William Phillips, both are looking forward to renewing the friendships of their Washington days.

Dr. Josef Nemecek Honored at Dinner

The Secretary of the Yugoslav Legation and Mme. Perazic entertained at a dinner last evening at their home, Villa Rosa, in honor of the retiring counselor of the Czechoslovakian Legation, Dr. Josef Nemecek. Dr. Nemecek will leave for New York next Wednesday and will sail October 23 on the Vulcania for Prague.

The legation staff is officially in mourning for the death of Thomas G. Masaryk, former president of Czechoslovakia, so parties for Dr. Nemecek are few and informal. The Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Hurban will entertain at a farewell dinner in his honor on Tuesday evening, the night before his departure.

The attache of the legation and Mme. Palic have cards out for a cocktail party on Monday for Dr. Nemecek.

James A. Farley's Niece Will Marry Tomorrow

An Associated Press dispatch from Hollywood reports that Dorothy McNulty, screen actress and former Broadway musical star, will be married tomorrow evening at the Westwood Community Church there to Dr. Lawrence S. Singleton, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Singleton, of Santa Barbara.

The bride-to-be is a niece of Postmaster General James A. Farley, and is playing in the Warner Brother's picture, "Swing Your Lady."

Dr. Najera Honored By Cuba for Efforts At Peace Conference

The Cuban government has awarded to the Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, the Great Cross of the National Order Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, in recognition of his extraordinary services to Cuba and to America in regard to the League of Nations, the Pan-American Union, and the Inter-American Peace Conference at Buenos Aires.

At an official ceremony to be announced later, the Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, will present to the Mexican Ambassador the insignia of the decoration.

Polish Diplomat Will Fete Bishop

The Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, will entertain at dinner this evening at the embassy in honor of Bishop Kubina, of Poland.

Guests will be Father Rolbiecki, Prof. Szczerbowiecz-Wieczor, Felix Labunski, the Counselor of the Embassy and Mme. Wankowicz, and the new Military Attache and Mme. Charmiec.

Countess Potocka, wife of the Ambassador, appears on the list of passenger arriving on the Normandie today, is not expected to return to this country until the middle month—according to ward from the embassy yesterday.

Visits Here

Underwood & Underwood.

MRS. ARTHUR J. HANLON, of New York, who is the guest of Gen. and Mrs. Charles Burnett at the Wardman Park Hotel, will return to New York tomorrow, and will sail on Saturday for Rome, where she will visit the Military Attache of the American Embassy and Mrs. Joyce Harris Paine.

Chilean Envoy Luncheon Host

The Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Manuel Trucco, entertained at a luncheon yesterday in honor of Gustavo Ross, former Minister of Finance of Chile, who left last evening after a brief visit in Washington.

The guests at the luncheon included Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State; Dr. Leo S. Howe, director general of the Pan-American Union; Dr. William S. Culbertson, former United States Ambassador to Chile; Frank Welch, of New York; Senorita Olga Patterson, the Senoritas Marta, Rebeca, and Graciela Trucco, daughters of the Ambassador; Manuel Pereira, First Secretary of the Chilean Embassy, and Carlos Campbell del C., Commercial Attache.

• • • •

Mrs. Anna Boal Wickes and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Robert Boal Wickes, with Meredith Wickes, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Boal Wickes, will sail this week from New York on the liner Champlain for France. They will be gone until late spring.

They will visit friends in Vevey and Chillon, Switzerland, after a stay in Paris, and Miss Wickes will enter school at Lausanne. They plan to return to their home.

• • • •

Mrs. Stewart Walker entertained at luncheon yesterday in the Louis Seize room of the Shoreham Hotel for Mrs. Witcher McCulloch and Mrs. Evelyn Clark, both of Charleston, W. Va.

The guests included Mrs. Mason Smith, Mrs. Joseph Graham, Mrs. Norma McDermott, Mrs. Charles J. Kappler, Mrs. Mason West, Mrs. Anderson Walters, Mrs. Harry Stewart, Miss Blanche Polkinhorn, and Miss Julia McFarland.

Wallace Woodwards Are Honeymooning

Now on their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Clifton Woodward, jr., whose marriage took place last Saturday in Baltimore, will make their home here at 6313 Sixteenth street.

Mrs. Woodward was the former Miss Mildred Virginia Munson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. Earl Munson, of Hagerstown, Md.

She has been a resident of Washington for some time, being employed here, while the bridegroom is also connected with a Washington company.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Martin announce the marriage of their daughter, Annie Laurie, to Edward B. Updike on October 3. The ceremony took place in the parsonage of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Belair, Md., with the Rev. J. J. Phillips officiating.

Both are residents of Falls Church, Va., and will make their home there after their return from their wedding trip October 15.

Visit Capital.

Mrs. John A. Coakley and her daughter, Mrs. Thomas E. Morton, are spending several days at the Shoreham while in Washington. They came to visit Mrs. Coakley's other daughter, Miss Ann Coakley, a student at Trinity College, and the latter's brothers, Henry Coakley, a student at Georgetown University, and Thomas Coakley, a student at Georgetown Preparatory School.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

FREDERICK STERLING, whose eloquence on the subject of American housing was credited in a recent dispatch as being partly responsible for the proposed visit of the Windsors to the United States, is in town for a week or ten days, and is staying with Mrs. Sterling's mother, Mrs. John H. Williams.

DUDLEY HARMON.

With his family, Mr. Sterling has been in Paris all summer as United States commissioner to the exposition, and conducted the duke and duchess about our building there when he paid a visit. He has been named Minister to Latvia, and after rejoining Mrs. Sterling in Paris, expects to continue on to Riga.

• • • •

ADD MISS JANE ACHESON to the list of definite debutantes. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Acheson, will present her to Capital society at a small tea the day after Thanksgiving. Since Miss Jane—it seems impossible that youthful Mrs. Acheson has a daughter old enough to "come out"—is a student at progressive Bennington College in Vermont, she will take part only in the holiday festivities here. Before Bennington, she attended Miss Hall's School in Pittsfield.

Mr. Acheson, now in law practice here, was formerly Undersecretary of the Treasury.

• • • •

WHAT PROMINENT Senator, a member of the Congressional party now visiting Honolulu, broke down and danced the hula after most of the guests had left the reception and luau (Hawaiian feast) given there recently by Princess David Aawanankoa? We know, but having just lost another round in our daily battle against discretion, we have decided not to tell.

The party was given for Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, but almost the entire delegation took time off from studying the question of Statehood for Hawaii to attend. All the Congressional women were dressed in their best, but were completely outshone in splendor by the legislators, who wore bright crimson sashes over white dress coats. Mrs. Tydings, our informant reports, looked lovely in a soft white period frock with strands of pikake leis and orchids.

• • • •

THE PRINCESS received her guests in her drawing room, with its royal standards belonging to the days when monarchs ruled Hawaii. She was gowned in a black lace holoku, which sparkled with the jeweled orders of King Kamehameha and King Kalakaua. A chorus sang chants in soft voices as the guests were presented to the hostess and the Tydings.

The lanai (porch to us mainlanders) was decorated with Hawaiian flowers in the profusion known only to these semitropic isles. Tables were set with ti leaves, water lilies, white and yellow ginger blooms, hibiscus and Hawaiian fruits.

• • • •

A COCKTAIL PARTY in the illuminated garden preceded the luau, which was featured by the traditional poi. Hulas, native music and chants were especially devised. Leis of maile and crown flowers were presented the guests, who included among Capitolites Senator and Mrs. William H. King, Senator and Mrs. Edward R. Burke, Senator and Mrs. Guy M. Gillette, Senator and Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Senator and Mrs. Ernest Lundeen and Senator Thomas Connally.

Also Representative and Mrs. Bertrand H. Snell, Representative and Mrs. Otis Bland, Representative and Mrs. John E. Rankin, Representative and Mrs. Claude A. Fuller, Representative and Mrs. Eugene B. Crowe, Representative and Mrs. John J. Dempsey, Representative and Mrs. John Nichols, Representative and Mrs. J. H. Tolan and Representatives Joseph W. Martin and Claude V. Parsons.

The party will return to the United States October 28.

Blisses Will Honor Gertrude Laughlin And Lieut. Chanler

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss have issued invitations to a dinner dance on Wednesday evening in honor of Miss Gertrude Laughlin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Laughlin, and her fiance, Lieut. Hubert Chanler. The party will be held at Dumbarton Oaks, the Bliss estate in Georgetown.

Miss Laughlin's wedding to Lieut. Chanler will take place on Saturday, October 23, at St. Paul's Church and will be followed by a reception at Meridian House, the home of the future bride's parents.

Mr. Campbell Arrives.

Arthur Bradley Campbell, son of the Marchioness of Huntly, will arrive from Europe today on the Europa and will be at the Ambassador Hotel in New York City on his annual winter sojourn. He will visit friends in Washinton later in the season.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Residential

The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George S. Messersmith have as their guests at the Shoreham, Mr. and Mrs. Milton M. Brown of Antwerp, Belgium, who will be in the Capital several days. Mr. and Mrs. Messersmith were stationed in Belgium for a number of years when he was American Consul General at Antwerp.

• • • •

Countess Szechenyi, wife of the former Hungarian Minister to London, will remain at the Breakers, her place in Newport, until late in November.

• • • •

Mrs. William Howard Taft has closed her home in Murray Bay, Quebec, and will spend the autumn at Kent House, in Greenwich, Conn.

• • • •

The Attorney General of Peru, Carlos Sayan, and Mrs. Sayan are in Washington for a visit, occupying a suite at the Wardman Park Hotel. Salvador Guiterreg, jr., of New York City, accompanied them to Washington and will be at the Wardman with them.

• • • •

The Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde will entertain informally on Saturday evening in honor of Col. and Mrs. Ellis B. Miller.

• • • •

Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Needham Lee Jones are spending the fall and winter in New Canaan.

• • • •

Mrs. Louis G. Greene, who, with her daughter, Miss Anne Carter Greene, has been spending a few days in New York, has returned to Washington.

• • • •

Mrs. Barron P. DuBois has returned home here after a stay in New York, where she stopped at the Junior League headquarters at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lathrom, Lieut. and Mrs. Berthold, and Mrs. H. B. Wilson will go to Baltimore Saturday for the Harvard-Navy football game. They will be the guests of Maj. and Mrs. Van Ness Ingram at Camp Hollaburg for the week-end.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. Allie Freed, of New York, are spending the winter in the Capital, and have taken an apartment at the Shoreham Hotel.

• • • •

Mrs. Myron Glaser and her young daughters, Susan and Barbara, are making an extended visit with Mrs. Glaser's mother, Mrs. D. Buckwell, in Brooklyn.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dudley Kenna, of Paris, who are visiting in this country at present, will be at the Wardman Park Hotel during their stay in Washington.

Centennial Of Missions Is Celebrated

Women of Washington Presbytery Mark Anniversary.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

The next hundred years will see men working for the cause of foreign missions with the same zeal with which women have worked during the past century, Dr. William P. Schell, of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, predicted yesterday in his address at the luncheon given by the women's societies of the Washington Presbytery as part of the celebration of the centennial of the board's founding. It was started in Baltimore, October 31, 1837. Two descendants of founders, Miss Helen Childs and Mrs. Dudley Jackson, were among guests at the head table.

Dr. Schell asserted there was a growing interest among men in mission work because "there is no salvation for the kind of world in which we're living except through the sort of thing Jesus Christ has given us," he declared.

"The purpose of foreign missions is to make Christ's teachings known to all mankind and to bring to bear on human life Christ's spirit and purpose. This is the only hope of the world today; the Christian spirit is the only force that can stop wars and bring about conciliation among nations. It is the force that is holding the world together."

Dr. Schell called attention to the growth of the Christian religion in India, China, Japan and in Africa, and commended the use of newspapers, motion pictures and the radio for missionary work.

Also on the program was Dr. Enrique C. Sobrepena, a religious and political leader in the Philippines. He helped write the constitution for the Islands and is now serving as moderator of the Evangelical Church of the Philippines.

Miss Yosko Saito, a young Japanese coloratura soprano, who was educated in a mission school and has consecrated her talent to Christian work, presented the musical program at the luncheon, wearing native costume. She expects to return to Japan in January and teach in a mission school.

Mrs. William L. Darby, general chairman of the centennial celebration, presided and introduced, in addition to Dr. Schell and Dr. Sobrepena, several other prominent members of the church who spoke briefly. Among them were Mrs. Walter Knipp, of Baltimore, synodical president; Mrs. J. Claude Keiper, president of the Presbyterial Society; Dr. Freeley Rohrer, moderator of the synod; the Rev. Harry Porter, pastor of Westminster Church; Mrs. Howard C. Waldo, Mrs. Irving C. Ketchum, who is in charge of the services being held this morning at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church; the Rev. Mr. Matson, moderator of the presbytery; Mrs. W. R. Hoeffler, treasurer; Mrs. Charles A. Stott, Mrs. Donald Clement, Mrs. Harry Blake and Mrs. Mabel Miller.

Century Club Will Hear Talk

The art section of the Twentieth Century Club opens its year Monday at 8:30 p. m. with an evening meeting for members and guests in the auditorium of the U. S. National Museum. William Marks Simpson, of Baltimore, will talk on the making of medals and coins.

The talk will be illustrated with lantern slides lent by the Metropolitan Museum, of New York, which show the early method of making medals and coins, and three reels of motion pictures showing the modern method. In the moving pictures, Laura Gardin Fraser, foremost woman medalist in this country, is seen making a medal. Mr. Simpson will be introduced by Richard Lahey, head of the Corcoran School of Art.

Another feature of the evening will be an exhibition of coins and medals from the collection of the Smithsonian Institution.

Receiving at the museum will be Mrs. Karl Fenning, president of the club; Mrs. Basil Manly, chairman of the social committee, and Mrs. Harold N. Fowler, chairman of the art section, assisted by her committee, Mrs. Frank M. Eliot, Mrs. Edwin H. Etz, Mrs. Charles W. Fairfax, Mrs. James T. Jardine, Mrs. Harry W. Price, Mrs. A. Curtis Wilgus and Mrs. Robert S. Yard.

Mr. Simpson is a young sculptor of Baltimore, who was born in Virginia and educated at the Virginia Military Institute and the Rinehart School of the Maryland Institute. He won the prix de Rome, which gave him the opportunity to study two years in Italy. From Europe he returned to Baltimore to become head of the sculpture department of the Rinehart School. He is himself a medallist, having just completed the Raleigh, Norfolk and Hagerstown Coins, and is intensely interested in the beauty of coins which we handle every day.

Tea Will Follow First Card Party Of G. O. P. League

The League of Republican Women will have its first card party of the autumn season Monday afternoon at the Wardman Park Hotel, with tea following. Bridge will start at 2 o'clock, and those who do not play will drop in later for tea.

Mme. Cantacuzene, president of the league, will receive and remain through the afternoon, although she is among those who do not play cards. Other officers of the league also will be present to assist.

The committee in charge of arrangements includes Miss Edna Patton, Mrs. G. Louis Weller, Mrs. James Barnes and Mrs. Frisby G. Elker. There will be a sale of candies and cakes as one of the features of the occasion.

Captial Woman In Chair at Girl Scout Meeting

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, of Washington, chairman of the field committee, wearing the new blue uniform of the Mariners, presided yesterday at the general session of the twenty-third national convention of the Girl Scouts, in Savannah, Ga. "Girl Scouting and the New Generation" was the topic of the day, with the Girl Scout program as it applies to the older girl receiving particular attention.

Mrs. Herbert Hoover, president of the national organization; Mrs. Arthur O. Choate and Mrs. Daisy Gordon Lawrence, the first registered Girl Scout, took part in the unveiling of a bronze tablet to Juliette Lowe, the founder, at the close of yesterday afternoon's session. The inscription reads:

"Birthplace of Girl Scouting in the United States, March 12, 1912. This building, formerly the stable of Juliette Lowe, founder, was the meeting place of the first Girl Scout troop in the United States. Dedicated October, 1937."

Mrs. J. Harris Franklin, acting commissioner of the Washington Girl Scouts; Mrs. W. Floyd Crosby, Mrs. Gerritt S. Miller, jr., Mrs. O. G. Hankins, Miss Dorothy Davidson, Miss Verginia Hammerly and Mrs. E. G. Bowman attended the reception given by the Savannah Girl Scout Council in the former home of Juliette Lowe Tuesday night. Mrs. Brooke, Mrs. Hoover and Mrs. William J. Babington MacCauley were in the receiving line.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

THE POSSIBILITY of establishing nursery schools on a basis which would provide opportunity for employment for college women specializing in nursery school work was discussed yesterday at the meeting of the committee on the economic and legal status of women at the A. A. U. W., under the chairmanship of Miss Bertha Nienburg. Heads of nursery and private kindergarten schools met with the committee.

Mrs. Adelia Heiney, of the National Child Research Center, is to call together a group of representatives from the committee and the various schools in the near future to talk over the business angle of the situation. The project is part of the plan of the A. A. U. W. committee to survey employment possibilities for college women in the various professions in the District.

MRS. EDGAR B. MERITT, who is chairman of radio for the General Federation of Women's Clubs as well as president of the Political Study Club, has just finished sending out 10,000 little blue sheets to clubs throughout the country, announcing the monthly broadcasts. There is also a little news sheet telling of the program from 4:30 to 5 p. m. on October 21, which will open this season's series.

George E. Sokolsky, author and lecturer; Muriel Draper, a student of European affairs, and the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, of Georgetown University, will be the speakers.

Sunday night Mrs. Meritt leaves for North Carolina where, on Monday, with the president and radio chairman of the North Carolina State Federation of Women's Clubs, she will inaugurate the radio program of the federation there. The broadcast will be from the N. B. C. Studios at Raleigh. She will remain in Wallace, N. C., a few days as the guest of Mrs. John Robinson, who is State chairman of radio.

The opening meeting of the Political Study Club is this Saturday at the Washington Club.

2 New Sections Formed by Club At Chevy Chase

Two new sections were authorized by the executive board of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase at its first meeting yesterday, a luncheon held at the Columbia Country Club, with Mrs. Joseph Maguire, the president, presiding.

The club is sponsoring a junior section which will begin with a membership of approximately 50. Miss Eleanor Finch is temporary chairman and Mrs. Arthur Nesbitt, adviser from the senior group. A new German section also has been formed at the request of 14 members of the club to carry on programs similar to those of the French section, whose members read and speak in the language. Mrs. St.Clair T. Thomas was appointed as chairman.

The evening section, formed last spring, of which Mrs. Alfred Savage is chairman, will invite one of the other departments to meet with it at each session for a special program.

There was discussion at the executive meeting yesterday of plans for the proposed clubhouse, and hope was expressed that the building would be under way before the end of the club year. The lot which has been purchased by the club for its home is opposite the grounds of the Columbia Country Club. Its meetings this year will be held in the customary place, the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, past president, is chairman of the building company for the clubhouse; Mrs. Frank P. Wilcox, vice chairman; Mrs. George A. Finch, secretary; Mrs. Frederick M. Kerby treasurer, and Mrs. Kenneth D. McRae, resident agent.

About 25 members of the executive board were present at luncheon, including the officers, Mrs. Maguire, Mrs. Kerby, first vice president; Mrs. Edward H. Helmuth, second vice president; Mrs. Arthur T. Davenport, recording secretary; Mrs. Paul H. Butler, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Kenneth D. McRae, treasurer, and Mrs. Louis S. Murphy, assistant treasurer.

The club's opening meeting of the season will take place next Wednesday. Luncheon will be served in the assembly room of the church at 12:15 with Mrs. William C. Kloman as hostess.

The program will include a group of songs by Mrs. James Lee Oliver and an address by Mrs. James LeCron, author and feature writer, who will speak on "What the Purely Democratic Countries of the World Are Doing for Their People," the club's theme this year. She spent last summer in Sweden and has prepared a series of syndicated articles on the social progress of the Scandinavian countries. She is coauthor of "One Thousand Ways to Please a Husband."

The club's literature section will meet Friday, October 22, at 2 p. m.

Kappas Rally At Founders' Day Banquet

Development of Women's Opportunities Traced at Function.

The woman of today must define for herself her principles and work for them with love, tolerance, appreciation and understanding, declared Dr. Mary Crawford last night in an address before members of the Kappa Kappa Gamma Fraternity of Washington at their Founders' Day banquet at the Raleigh Hotel. Dr. Crawford, who is medical director of the Federal Reserve Bank in New York (and, in private life, is Mrs. Edward Schuster), pointed out the necessity for women in organizations to use their organized influence constructively.

Taking as her subject "A Kappa Looks at Life," Dr. Crawford traced the development of women's opportunities as she has seen it. She told of having helped her mother in patriotic work during the Spanish-American War, in her early girlhood and of serving as an ambulance surgeon overseas in the World War. "I have seen suffrage come; the opening of new fields and opportunities for women," she said, "and now I have also seen, in some countries, the dropping away of women's rights until they have nothing left but the right to bear children and accept dictation. I have seen women's right to work challenged in this country; the shadow of events abroad casting themselves over our land.

"The question comes to all of us: What am I going to do about it? The answer must be from organized women. The organization with ideals behind it such as those of our fraternity is a tool with which a constructive purpose can be accomplished. Our membership includes various races, religions and social interests but we function as a unit for good because of the principles to which we adhere as a group. We pledged ourselves in our college days to do whatever we do with love and affection for our sisters. When this spirit governs the activity of any group its opportunity for accomplishment is limitless."

Dr. Crawford was introduced by Mrs. A. Floyd Rothballer, president of the Washington Alumnae Chapter of the fraternity, who presided at the banquet. Among the 125 Kappas who attended was Mrs. Charles Leaphart, former grand secretary and grand secretary and grand registrar, who came recently to Washington from Missoula, Mont., where Dr. Leaphart was head of the law school of the University of Montana, and whose daughter, Mary, is a Kappa at George Washington University. Others at the head table were Mrs. G. M. Hostetler, former director of provinces; Miss Frances Wolfe, of Silver Spring, president of Lamda Province; Miss Helen Farrington, president of Gamma Psi Chapter at the University of Maryland; Miss Kathleen Bulow, president of Gamma Chi Chapter at and Mrs. C. C. Schiffler, who was a member of Gamma Omega Chapter, at Dennison University, in Ohio, and who came here a little more than a year ago, when Col. Schiffler took over the management of the Raleigh.

Miss Dulin talked briefly, tellin of the plans for the new Kappa house to be opened at College Park in November, and Miss Bulow told of college activities at George Washington, where the chapter has an apartment in Sorority Hall, at 2129 G street. The George Washington and Maryland chapters are called "the twins," as they were installed at the same time by the alumnae group.

The program last night was completed with the singing of Kappa songs, led by Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist, an alumnae member. The party here was one of the many rallies held throughout the country in observance of Founders Day.

C. I. O. Assails Labor Rulings; Broun Protests

Convention Nearly Split on Criticism of NLRB as Program Is Drafted.

By the United Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 13.—Leaders of the Committee for Industrial Organization in a tumultuous session late today crushed left wing objections and placed the meeting of 150 C. I. O. chieftains on record in favor of a policy supporting the sanctity of collective bargaining contracts, and pledging co-operation in safeguarding the operation of these agreements.

The delegates also condemned recent decisions by the National Labor Board as being contrary to the provisions of the Wagner-Connery act, by which the board was created, and approved a four-point Federal legislative program. This program called for a wages and hours bill, licensing of all industries operating in interstate commerce, appropriation of sufficient WPA and PWA funds to provide jobs for every American worker, and expansion of the social security act.

Resolutions were prepared for adoption tomorrow supporting efforts to obtain a pardon for Tom Mooney, serving a life sentence in San Quentin Prison in connection with the San Francisco Preparedness Day bombings; recommending an adequate Federal farm program; protection of civil liberties; outlining a State legislative program; proposing a Senate inquiry into the "spy tactics" of Eugene Grace, head of Bethlehem Steel, and Tom Girdler, chairman of the board of Republic Steel, and condemning the conduct of South Chicago, Ill., police in the Memorial Day rioting at the Republic Steel plant.

Harry Bridges, West Coast maritime leader, called for an economic boycott of all Japanese goods because of the undeclared war in China. Responsible C. I. O. officials tonight said that the Sino-Japanese war will be the subject of a resolution, but they expressed doubt that a boycott would be indorsed unless President Roosevelt made it a matter of national policy.

Murray Presides.

The first hint that today's session would be stormy came from Philip Murray, with whom John L. Lewis consults in final C. I. O. policies. He presided at the conference today in the absence of Lewis, who was reported slightly indisposed.

Murray instructed all delegates to be in their seats at the afternoon session. Soon after the meeting began a resolution was offered listing the C. I. O. Federal legislative aims. It passed unanimously.

Then Lee Pressman, chief counsel of the C. I. O., read the resolution attacking the National Labor Relations Board. The resolution referred to the board's decision in the case of the Commonwealth Steel Co., of St. Louis, in which it was held that minority groups held equal rights with majority groups to bargain collectively with the management. It embraced also a decision, unlisted, and referring to the "automobile industry."

Act Is Praised.

"Such decisions, if unchallenged, might well destroy the industrial unions that have been organized through the C. I. O. involving several millions of workers," the resolution stated. It praised the national labor relations act, however, as the "most important Federal legislation ever enacted in this country in the interest of the workers."

Heywood Broun, president of the American Newspaper Guild, raised the first cry of opposition. He said that the resolution would place the C. I. O. in the position of co-operating with the American Federation of Labor, which in its Denver convention demanded that the power of the labor board be curbed. Broun insisted that the Labor Board had rendered several decisions of benefit to the cause of industrial unionism.

Murray, however, contended that the board's decision was "vicious and dangerous," declared that the Steel Workers Organizing Committee had protested to the board its ruling was contrary to law and called for unanimous approval of the resolution. He got it.

'Propaganda' Attacked.

Pressman then read what he described as a "most important resolution." It stated the C. I. O. objectives of obtaining written collective bargaining agreements; attacked what it termed "false propaganda" about the "irresponsibility" of C. I. O. unions in contractual obligations and resolved that:

"The C. I. O. expresses its firm policy as being one committed to the determined adherence of its contract obligations and responsibilities.

"Employers who enter into such collective bargaining agreements will receive the complete co-operation and support of the unions affiliated with the C. I. O. in carrying through the full administration of such collective bargaining and wage agreements."

Then the battle began. Sidney Hillman, head of the textile workers organizing committee and president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, strode to the well of the conference room and denounced "wild-cat" or "quickie" strikes by C. I. O. unions. He contended that C. I. O. unionists must give fair treatment to employers who sign collective bargaining agreements with them.

Warning that no labor union can prosper if it breaks contracts, Hillman said:

"Obedience of contractual obligations is a C. I. O. policy. Unions that wish to remain in the C. I. O. must observe this policy."

Mother of Revived Baby Rejoices

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Told yesterday her 11-day-old son is virtually normal in health now, Mrs. John Garry smiled happily from her cot in a Jersey City hospital. The baby, without an apparent heartbeat for 15 minutes, was revived by use of adrenalin injected directly into the heart.

Delay in Treating Child's Lisp Dangerous, Clinic Head Warns

Miss Jennie Hedrick Says Defects May Linger for Years if Not Corrected Before Victim Reaches School Age.

When baby tells his mama to "dimme dat," it's no laughing matter, advises Miss Jennie Hedrick, whose free speech clinic opens today at 1 p. m. at Georgetown Hospital.

"If a child's speech defect is not corrected before school age," Miss Hedrick said, "it may linger on for years and years."

Parents do not help matters any, when they answer baby in baby talk.

"I can not stress enough," Miss Hedrick stated, "the responsibility of the parent in bringing the child to a speech clinic for treatment."

No Two Cases Alike.

The clinic at the hospital was established 20 years ago by Dr. George P. Kober and is open to children and adults afflicted with speech defects.

There are no two similar cases, Miss Hedricks said. Each case of stuttering, stammering, disping and articulation must be treated individually.

Stuttering and stammering usually result from the attempt of parents and teachers to change a left-handed pupil to a right-handed one. It confuses the child, Miss Hedricks stated, and some speech defect becomes apparent.

"Sometimes stuttering is the result of an over-excitement of the nerves," she said.

Fright Causes Defect.

In the correction of the tongue-tied child, exercises are given to stretch the frenum, a muscle under the tongue, which prohibits the proper sounding of the letters d, t, l and n.

"This muscle," Miss Hedrick said, "in the tongue-tied child is so short that the tongue does not have the proper freedom."

In some cases it is necessary to resort to surgery to lengthen the muscle.

Another defect is "blocked speech."

"One child treated last year had a blocked speech which had resulted from fright. Investigation proved that the parents had been treating the child too harshly and resultant fright caused the defect," she said.

"A peculiar aspect of a stutterer," Miss Hedrick said, "is his ability to sing and pray without difficulty."

In singing and praying," she explained, one thinks of the voice and not the speech.

Men and boys are subject to speech defects in greater abundance than women, she observed.

Wage Conference Set for Next Week

The conference on the minimum retail wage for women clerks in this city is scheduled for early next week to decide what scale to recommend to the District Minimum Wage Board, it was stated yesterday.

With the employer and the employe groups $7 apart on their budget estimates as to what it costs a single woman to live here, indications are a compromise wage will be approved, possibly between the two figures.

The employers submitted an estimate of $14.47, whereas the employes outlined a budget of $21.57. The scale in effect when the minimum wage law was declared unconstitutional in 1923 was $16.50.

With all testimony apparently in, the trio of conferees representing the public held a closed meeting Tuesday night.

Purge NLRB, Boycott Japan, A. F. of L. Votes

Labor Convention Petitions Roosevelt to Discharge 5 Board Officials.

stances with full knowledge of the facts involved."

That the board, in direct contravention of the meaning of the law, has repeatedly "denied employes the right of designating the bargaining unit and the right of selecting representatives of their own choosing with full freedom."

Petition Suggested.

"Your committee recommends," Frey said solemnly, "that the president and executive council be authorized and instructed to seek immediate correction of the deplorable, disruptive and destructive condition above referred to, by petitioning the President of the United States for prompt and adequate relief . . . and that Congress be requested to amend this act so as to prevent hereafter the usurped authority now being exercised by the board and its agencies."

Frey then launched bitter extemporaneous denunciation of the board. He specifically asked removal of Smith and three regional directors: Mrs. Elinore Herrick, New York; Mrs. Alice Rosseter, San Francisco, and A. Howard Myers, Boston.

"I have no confidence in the administration of the National Labor Relations Board as at present set up," Frey shouted, "because many of the regional directors and their assistants are violent partisans to the C. I. O., and because that partisanship goes directly into the National Labor Relations Board itself."

Myers, he said, was formerly assistant to Sidney Hillman, right-hand man to John L. Lewis. He charged that employment elections had been delayed several times "to give the C. I. O. more time to organize a membership in those plants."

Accuses Board.

"I now want to charge the board itself with having done more during recent months to destroy the practice of collective bargaining," he roared, "than all of the efforts of all of the anti-union forces in the country combined."

He requested dismissal of Smith on the ground that he entertained Lewis and the counselor for the Russian embassy at his home while several cases of interest to both the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. were pending before the board.

Another demand was for the removal of Charles W. Hope, Northwest N. L. R. B. director, on charges he was "pro-C. I. O." and had "injected" himself into a rival union dispute among workers on the Grand Coulee Dam.

The convention, eager to conclude its sessions tomorrow, then rapidly approved the committee report on both the Wagner act and wages and hours bill and voted to elect its officers tomorrow afternoon.

Before completing its business, it rushed through commitment to a Japanese boycott, recalling "the rapid extension of dictatorship" and the existent condition of "national brigandage." A committee report recommending effective protest against Japanese aggression in China was unanimously adopted.

"Old Stuff," Says Myers.

Boston, Oct. 13 (AP).—A. Howard Myers, whose removal as regional director of the National Labor Relations Board was demanded today, said "that's old stuff" when apprised of the request.

You firebrands who want to wade in and kick the nonsense out of Japan better go over to the museum west of the monument and see the several different kinds of artificial arms, to which can be attached all sorts of aluminum gadgets which will pick up matches, blow your nose almost as well as a real hand and even hell a dictator. These gadgets for war heroes, along with those aluminum noses and chins, might take some of that martial spirit out of you.

The President gets a pretty good massaging in "I'd Rather Be Right," the new Kaufman show, in which George Cohan plays Chief Magistrate . . . But if Mr. Roosevelt caught cold or anything else happened to him which would make it bad taste to kid him, the show couldn't go on. So it's insured with Lloyd's for a substantial sum against any Presidential mishaps.

Incidentally, that title, Chief Magistrate, may have had something to do with President Roosevelt's theory that he ought to run the Supreme Court . . . Maybe he's literal enough to think that Chief Magistrate means Chief Magistrate.

I'm afraid President Roosevelt should award his famous roving dunce cap to the man who wrote the paragraph in the middle of his last speech, beginning "You and I have heard" . . . First he urges crop control for farmers, as a virtue . . . Then he condemns output control for factories as if it were a sin . . . If one is a virtue, so is the other . . . If one is a sin, so is the other. And if one is just a muddled human compromise, excusable only by the virtue of necessity, then so is the other. Q. E. D., as the President says.

There's a poignant and peculiar sweetness about those silk dresses which fill one room at the Smithsonian . . . Ordinary American girls grown up, often of humble birth, with no divine right except their personalities and the votes of the citizenry for Dad or Brother or Hubby, with no crowns or scepters to lean on, they got into the White House and had to swing it . . . Any Washington matron who drives downtown through the 5 o'clock traffic to pick up her husband (or anybody's husband) must be made of the same stuff as Molly Pitcher and Barbara Frietchie . . . Two days in Bermuda—which, with Mackinac Island, is the last refuge of the horse and buggy age and the stronghold of the bicycle—fortifies my belief that the bicycle is the answer to Washington's traffic problem . . . And bicycles would give the office workers big leg muscles and reduce the menace of kidney trouble, that dread swivel chair disease.

Sooner or later the right of the bravos of the black legions and klans and foreign bunds to wear robes and uniforms and intimidate the population may come to the Supreme Court for decision . . . Maybe he was just a spy in the Klan.

Washington Model Airplane Experts Prepare for Ft. Myer Tourney

Post Staff Photos.

At Powell Junior High School Washington, Mayo Cox, 12, looks over a skeleton plane before putting on the fabric (left), while Billy Lewis, 13, makes a motor adjustment. Center—John H. Williams, instructor in modelcraft making at the school, coaches Billy Wright, 13, and Eldron Halley, 12 (right).

More Than 100 Boys From D. C., Maryland and Virginia to Compete Saturday for Prizes and Recognition.

On Fort Myer drill field next Saturday more than 100 boys from the District and metropolitan area of Virginia and Maryland will compete in the tenth annual model aircraft tournament sponsored by the Aero Club of Washington.

The tournament will be continued November 13 at Constitution Hall, where the champion will be selected. Sanctioned by the National Aeronautic Association, all records and distances established will be recognized for national championship determinations.

Costs of models entered will vary from 20 to 40 cents for small, fragile models to around $30 for the big gas-powered specimens. Sizes will vary from 18 or so inches in length to almost that many feet.

John H. Williams, instructor in modelcraft making at Powell Junior High School and supervisor of the District Model Aircraft League, said that at the first tournament ten years ago planes that would stay aloft 30 to 40 seconds were considered very good. The District record now is 12 minutes, and some of the models this year are expected to shatter that.

During the depression, Williams said, the number of boy airplane builders in the District lessened considerably, because instruction was limited. The situation is looking up for the model flyers now, however. At the Buchanan Playground this summer Williams turned out more than 50 good flyers, and there were other teachers. Almost a year is required in training before the boys are capable of turning out models good enough for the tournament.

Several boys who have participated in the District shows have made good in commercial aviation. Ernest Stout, one year's champion, is now with the Aeronautics Branch of the Department of Commerce, Robert Wiehle, who was champion for two years straight, is now with the Model Crafts Shops.

In addition to the championship award, trophies are awarded to the boy who places first in each class. The champion will be selected from boys who enter at least four of the six events of the tournament and make the best showing in the contests.

The National Aeronautic Association will help select the judges, of whom one is expected to be William R. Enyart, who is now recovering from a recent crash-up.

Traffic Claims 2 Aged Women; Year's Toll Is 83

Two elderly women died last night as the result of traffic injuries, bringing the 1937 toll for the District to 83.

Mrs. Josephine Lohmyer, 72, of 432 Emerson street northwest, was injured fatally when she was struck by an automobile in front of her home.

Police were told the victim had alighted from a bus and started to cross the street when the automobile, driven by Edward C. Duval, 20, of 54 Channing street northwest, struck her.

She was taken to Casualty Hospital, where she died. The driver of the automobile will appear at a coroner's inquest.

Hit by Truck.

Elizabeth Jefferson, 65, colored, of the 200 block of L street southwest, died in Emergency Hospital of injuries she suffered when hit by a truck at Fourth and L streets southwest on October 9.

Driver of the truck, police said, was Oliver Ray, 35, colored, of the 300 block of M street southwest. He is being held in District Jail for hit-and-run and driving without lights.

Fatalities from traffic in Washington this time last year were 66.

Boy Hurt Seriously.

Lawrence McDowell, 9, colored, of the 700 block of Second street northwest, was in critical condition in Casualty Hospital last night, after having been struck by an automobile in the 100 block of Sixth street northeast. Thomas E. Davis, 21, of the first block of Sixth street northeast, driver of the car, was held by police.

Louis Rouleau, 15, of Silver Spring, Md., was struck by an automobile yesterday as he was delivering newspapers in the 8600 block of Colesville pike. Rouleau's skull was fractured. Driver of the automobile, according to police, was George H. Skinner, of Emerson street northeast.

Four persons were injured in a collision between an automobile and a truck on West Carroll avenue, Takoma Park.

Miss Ruth Gilger, 24, of Beltsville, driver of an automobile, was cut about her head; Theodore C. Byerly, of Beltsville, was cut about the scalp; Noah Byerly, 2, suffered a cut tongue, and David Byerly, 4, suffered bruises. All were passengers in Miss Gilger's automobile.

Raymond Holland, of 1223 C street southeast, driver of the truck, was unhurt.

Three Hurst in Collision.

Three men suffered injuries in an automobile crash at Naylor road northeast, near the District line. Police found the men in an unconscious state, thrown clear of their car.

They were identified as Charles Cohen, 28; Louis Schwartz, 30, both of 1201 Thirteenth street northwest, and Theodore Keart, 33, of 1214 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Removed to Casualty Hospital, the men were treated for internal injuries and possible skull fractures.

The driver of the colliding car was Levi C. Blackburn, 30, of Brandywine, Md., who was not held. Police could not determine immediately which of the injured men was driving.

Business Levy Is Explained by Morgan in Talk

Application of the new District business privilege tax, returns for which must be filed by next Saturday, was reviewed last night by Jo V. Morgan, administrator of the tax, in the first fall meeting of the Brotherhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

Morgan described the opposition to the tax since its passage during the closing sessions of Congress, and predicted that if it were reenacted by the next Congress extensive changes would probably be made.

"With the present revenue needs of the District, either this tax, in altered form, or some equally productive tax from the revenue standpoint, will be passed by the next Congress," he said.

He said the tax had been passed purely for revenue purposes, without any aim toward use of the tax for social or economic control. "It is an excise tax, not an income tax. It is not a tax levied on gross receipts, but measured by these receipts," he stated.

Morgan emphasized the need for filing returns and obtaining a license to do business under the new law before October 16. Beyond the exemption of $2,000 provided in the law, the tax applies to all commercial enterprises, regardless of other licenses obtained for business purposes under separate laws, he explained.

"The maximum penalty for not having a license under the tax may amount to as much as $1,000 a day," he said.

William L. Bush, president of the association, presided.

Youth Who Tried To Save Police Dog Sues Dog Catchers

A neighborhood pet police dog became the source of a $10,000 damage suit filed in District Court against Poundmaster Frank B. Marks, and his assistant, Clyde Underwood, yesterday.

Forrest C. Plummer, 17, a messenger boy, asked the sum as the result of "serious personal injuries," suffered, he alleges, as the result of an attack on him when he tried to keep Sport, the dog, from the clutches of the dog catcher.

In his petition, the youth said he had been hurt after he tried to save Sport when the officials had cornered him and were about to take him to the pound.

Represented by Attorneys Dorsey E. Offutt and William Love, the boy said he had been attacked by Underwood, who was trying to catch Sport. In his suit the boy stated that he had ceased his efforts when he saw the dog catchers throw a net over Sport's head. When he remonstrated with the captors, Plummer alleges he was struck in the face.

Lights Installed At 14th and F Sts.

Time and modern methods of traffic control finally caught up with Fourteenth and F streets and Policeman Homer H. Hartman yesterday.

After 21 years of hand waving and whistle blowing from his street-center "tub," Hartman stepped modestly aside to make way for progress.

But the day wasn't entirely a total loss for the venerable crossing officer—they let him push a little button turning on the intricate system of signal lights which took his place.

Gunmen Get $8,400.

Paterson, N. J., Oct. 13 (AP).—Gunmen held up the paymaster of a silk mill today and escaped in two automobiles with a pay roll of approximately $8,400.

Tax Conference Planned Monday

More than 20 Washington business and professional organizations have accepted the invitation of Theodore S. Grape, president of the Federation of Business Men's Association of the District, to attend a conference at the Hamilton Hotel Monday to discuss means of combatting the business privilege tax.

Two representatives of each association will attend the conference and appoint committees to draw up a more equitable form of taxation. All business, commercial and professional trade organizations in the District are invited to send representatives to the meeting, Grape announced.

Auto Victim Dies.

Eagle Rock, Va., Oct. 13 (AP).—Harry Kidd, 20, victim of an automobile accident near here Saturday night, died this morning in a Roanoke Hospital.

D. C. Chinese Raise $7,650 War Chest

An average of more than $10 for each of Washington's 700 Chinese has been raised here to help pay for the defense of the homeland and to aid war refugees, it was disclosed yesterday.

The National Salvation Association, the Chinese Patriotic League and the Chinese Student Club of Washington have deposited $7,650 with the New York agency of the Bank of China, according to Jan Chao Shieh, president of the student club and an attache at the Chinese Embassy.

Of this sum, $5,650 has been sent to the Chinese government for its national defense fund, the balance having been set aside for relief work.

Boy, 3, Hurt in Fall.

Thomas Higgs, 3, of 329 Eleventh street southwest, suffered serious internal injuries yesterday when he fell off a second-floor porch. He was taken to Gallinger Hospital.

Garden Contest Winner Given Prizes at A. U.

Winners of the ninth annual garden contest sponsored by the American University Park Association and the American University Park Garden Club were awarded prizes last night at a meeting of the association in Hurst Hall.

Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, presented the 50 winners with trophies and plants.

First prize of six Azaleas plants and a certificate of master gardener went to L. T. Savage, a former president of the group, for gardens at his home 4900 Albemarle street northwest.

Other contestants receiving plants and certificates were H. C. Raup, Mrs. Ora G. Visel, E. S. Morgan, E. B. Taylor, Mrs. Oliver T. Carr, P. N. Hedlick, W. T. Betts, R. W. Eppley and M. A. Boykin.

In the garden picture contest, Nancy Williams was awarded first prize. Other winners in the picture contest were Mrs. H. Ryman, second; Mrs. P. V. Jacobs, [illegible] and Connie Jacobs, fourth.

Winners of first, second and third prizes, respectively, in the junior garden contest were George [illegible]set, jr., Polly Williams and May Ann Law.

The association adopted a resolution opposing any increase in the District budget. Approval of the drive to provide lunches for District school children also was given and a collection taken for the fund.

Chest Expected To Reach Goal Of $2,059,000

Achievement of the Community Chest's goal of $2,059,000 in this year's drive was forecast last night by Clarence Phelps Dodge, president, at a speakers' unit meeting that heard Dr. Allen A. Stockdale, chairman of the group, declare the chest to be "the best possible method evolved for financing needs that must be met."

"Since my return from the West," Dodge said, "I have sensed a feeling of optimism over the success of the Chest this year."

"The Washington Community Chest is an integral part of this community," Dr. Stockdale declared. "It has the support of the leading business, professional and religious leaders of the city."

Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the Chest, pointed out that the population of the city has increased 130,000 during the last ten years, with a corresponding increase in welfare needs. Coupled with this, he said, four suburban counties and the City of Alexandria have been added to the campaign quota this year.

Willett explained that there has been a decided curtailment of Federal relief funds, starting with abandonment of all relief for families in which there is one employable person. This month unemployable families in which there is no minor child have been dropped from the Federal rolls, Willett said.

Washington Bar Inquiry Starts Today

Committee to Study Conduct of Lawyers in Police Court.

An investigation of alleged "irregularities" in the conduct of some attorneys practicing in the Police Court will open today as a result of a conference late yesterday between judges of that court and members of the bar association.

In conference with Judges Walter J. Casey, Edward Curran and Robert Newman (Judge J. P. McMahon is on vacation), Austin F. Canfield, chairman of a subcommittee of the District Bar Association, and the entire membership of his committee was appointed to investigate rumors that have been passed about concerning the conduct of lawyers, bondsmen and others. The committee is composed of Attorneys William Gallagher, T. Edward O'Connell, George Monk and Franklyn Yasmer.

Possible revision of the rules of the court was one of the aims of the committee. It was explained that none of the rules of the court had as yet been scrutinized by the committee members, but that any found wanting should be suggested for revision.

Stating that he deplored "sensationalism" that might ensue from the investigation, Canfield said last night he had sat with the three judges for more than three hours, discussing the problems that confront them. He said that the "capping" of cases, the misrepresentation of lawyers to the court, and the improper alliance between bondsmen and others would be investigated.

Any irregularities that might be found will be reported to the judges of the Police Court for appropriate action, Canfield said. He emphasized that the only cases being investigated now were based on mere rumor and might not be substantiated.

In a statement last night Canfield said: "The bar as a whole here is good generally, and generally speaking is beyond any criticism of immoral or unethical practices. The bar association feels that any charge of misconduct should be completely and vigorously investigated. If the investigation discloses irregularities then the association should leave nothing undone to correct same. And in flagrant cases it will take appropriate action. It is with that in mind that our committee is undertaking its work in Police Court."

Canfield asserted he expected the committee to report back to the Police Court judges within a short time. The chairman professed not to know which cases were to be subjected to searching investigation that is promised, though it was stated by him in an address before the District Bar Association in the Mayflower Hotel Tuesday night that there might be a "purge" in sight for the Police Court.

McCARTHY SIGNS 3-YEAR CONTRACT TO LEAD YANKS

This Morning..

With Shirley Povich

Such a pusson is Goldie Ahearn, nee Isadore Goldshstein dot already he is vurrying about the gate receipts of his box-fights Monday night. Incidentally, you'll have to pardon my Southwest accent as I have shoost been holding conservation mit Goldie, who is the box-fight matchmaker for Choe Toiner.

Noo? Und ve is gesheft, I made the mistake of hasking Goldie at his Ninth Street Shoit Shoppe mit two p's und a "e".

"Schlecht, mine frinde," said Goldie with a sorrowful shake of his head. "It giffs tsoris. Your newspapers are laying off my fights like I am going to gat rich from dem. For charity I am volking in dese fights, but vot do I see for my three cents eggzept pages full mit voild serius und football. Meanvile, dose kiddies go hongry.

* * * *

POVICH.

"Free lunches for de kiddies dis show giffs und you treat it like it is money in my pocket. Choe Toiner und me lose money on dis show. Ve lay off for five weeks to put dis show over so de kiddies should haben sooo essen at lunch time in de schools. Oi vey! Dose kiddies vill be hongry if your newspapers do not toin on de heat. Pubsleeeity! Dot's vot ve need!

* * * *

"Perhaps tomorrow morning you print a nize picture of my main eventer, Denny London, huh? Put on de blast for de show. It is for charity, I tell you. Vot can you lose? I slave. I work, I go crazy giffing good fights for de show und I lose money, but I do not complain from that. I am not hasking much. Shoost some pictures in de paper und some writeups about my show. It is a mitzvah—a blessing!

* * * *

"The committee holds meetings, they hold luncheons, they tall Choe Toiner und me they vant a good show. They say ve can spend $4,000 for de fighters, but ve are honest. I alvays try to save a dollar here and there so I spend only $2,800 for de fighters und I giff 'em good fights.

* * * *

"I can have Marty Gallagher und George Brescia for my top fight but I do not take dem two bums. I vant action on de card, so I sign Gevinson und London. I see by de papers dot Gallagher and Brescia sign to fight at the Hipp in New York. But I do not vant dem. For New York perhaps dey are all right, but I vant a high class show—someding dot can stand de heat.

* * * *

"Und so who do I get for Gevinson? Denny London, no less. A kid vot has class. It makes two Jewish boys in de main fight und dot is good. Alvays do two Jewish boys make a good fight. Mebbe I do not know my business, huh? I cannot get Harry Jeffra, the champ, for Gevinson, so I get London. He is a schlager dot London. He knocked out Jeffra und he knocked out Varias Milling und he vill giff Gevinson a good fight.

* * * *

"You can write him up in de papers, too. Tell 'em how Denny London was born deaf—and dumb, too. Couldn't talk or hear until vun night he forgot to duck und had to take nine on de floor. De bell saved him. But dot sock on de head did someding to his senses. For de foist time in his life, he hoid de bell! Honest, my friend, Dewey Fragetta, vouldn't lie to me und Dewey svears it happend!

* * * *

"Und don't forget, I got anudder star bout—a beauty. Between Irish Johnny Dean und Cowboy Scott. On any oder card it vould be a main eventer. It is de fight I vas keeping to open up de Arena, but vot do I do? Dose Kids I don't vant to go hongry! I t'row in Dean und Scott on de Free Lunch Show und take money from my own pocket. It is a natural!

* * * *

"Right in here, two veeks ago, dey almost had it out—Dean and Scott. Vun vord led to anudder und Scott und Dean vent at it. Dey knocked my 49-cent ties into de three-for-a-dollar shorts and tipped over my whole rack of Klassy Kut Klothes vich I had marked down to $19.75 mit two pair pants. It is a natural—dot Dean und Scott. Ven dot vild Irishman gets in dere mit dot cowboy it vill be someding to see.

* * * *

"My whole card is a pip, I tell ya. You can see, business is slack here now, but if I do not know anyt'ing else, I know de fight business. I am putting Al Reed in dere mit Ray Ingram for six and I am putting Baby Manuel in dere mit Armanda Sicilia for six. Dot means action. Don't forget, dis Manuel knocked out Henry Armstrong, who is fighting Sarron for de title.

"But pussonally, I lose money. But I do not care. For de kinder I am doing it—Choe Toiner und me! So de kiddies do not go hongry, I am volking und slaving und neglecting my business und hasking you to toin on de heat. I lose——"

At which point a customer came in, headed for the 49-cent tie rack, and Goldie transferred the pressure.

Houghton's Reign Ends With Loss to Spencer

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 13.—Al Houghton's four-year reign as Open golf champion of the State of Maryland was ended here today by Washington's Cliff Spencer, making his second start as a free lance professional, who played the Woodholme course in 74—75, 149. He won the $120 top money.

Second by a single stroke was the morning round leader, Rut Coffey, Winchester, Va., who slumped to 77 after a 73 in the initial trip over the course that earned him the special $15 prize for low round of the day and boosted his earnings to $105, including second money of $90.

Third was Houghton, the Old Point Comfort (Va.) professional. He rallied in the afternoon for a 74 and a 151 total for the 36 holes, a quartet of strokes ahead of Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase. Barnett completed the money winners list with 77-78—155.

Harry Jeffra, bantamweight boxing champion of the world, who announced in a recent radio broadcast that he was thinking of turning golf professional, showed his links debut was a bit previous, as his pair of 90's were the highest score turned in among the 55 contestants. He played today from the simon-pure ranks.

Otto Greiner, Forest Park, who played here during the past year, was tied with Houghton with a 151 score. He won the low amateur prize. Spencer Overton was second with 157.

The 6,649-yard course took its toll of the premier shotmakers in this section as a day-long rain added to the hazardous going. Toddy Penna, Chicago, led a long list of pros who ran out of the money, including Diffenbaugh, Shorey, Treder and Walper from Washington. Walper, after a morning 75, was in line for a winning berth but soared to 81 in the second round.

Spencer found the par 38 first nine to his liking as he played it in 37 and 36, respectively, including seven birdies in the two trips over 3,498-yard nine holes. He scored sub-par holes on the first, third and seventh, twice each. The other was on the ninth, and none was the result of unusually long putts.

The back nine was a tartar for the former Beaver Dam professional who was a total of six over par, including a 10-inch putt carelessly missed on the tenth hole and a six on the fifteenth.

Coffey, in the van after 27 holes, required 40 shots on the back nine to lose by a stroke. Houghton, also hitting the ball well from tee to green, made his longest putt on the final hole, a 6-footer for a regulation par, that relinquished the title he has held since 1932.

One hundred and fifty-six totals, a stroke out of the prize money, were shared by Walper, Hugh McLellan, Johnny Bass, Ralph Beach and Glenn Spencer, brother of the new champion.

Chisox Beat Cubs; Win Fourth Title

Whitehead's Effective Work in Pinches Stops Bruins.

By William Weekes.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—John Henderson Whitehead, the problem child of the White Sox, hurled the American League to another victory today as the Southsiders conquered the Cubs, 6 to 1, for their fourth consecutive Chicago championship.

Whitehead, 200-pound, talented right-hander, who has been disciplined for overlooking training rules, the last time early in the regular American League campaign when he was suspended without pay, had his little troubles, but was at his best when the going was toughest.

Three times after they scored their lone run in the first inning, the National Leaguers started innings with hits, but the 12,457 hardy fans who attended the seventh and final game of the series saw little except Whitehead as he hauled himself out of trouble by use of the double-play ball.

No Deadheads.

He allowed nine hits, fanned three and did not issue a pass. He did not look as though he would be around long when Stan Hack, the first man to face him, drilled a double to right and scored on Frank Demaree's single off Boze Berger's leg. Whitehead was right there at the finish, however, as he forced Gabby Hartnett to hit into a double play with the bases loaded in the ninth.

The Sox, winners of the 1931, 1933 and 1936 series before they reaffirmed their domination over the Cubs today, went to work on Davis in the second inning. He departed at the start of the seventh, and was followed by Carleton. Singles by Rip Radcliff and Jack Hayes, combined with a walk to Luke Appling, gave the American Leaguers two runs in the second, and the same group of boys produced two more on two hits in the fourth.

Appling got one hit, a double, in one official time at bat. He walked on three other occasions, turning one of his passes into a run in the sixth with the aid of Zeke Bonura's single, a sacrifice and Gabby Hartnett's throwing error. Mike Kreevich accounted for the final run of the season with a homer off Carleton into the leftfield seats in the seventh.

Bergman Compares Grid Pass Thrill to That of Home Run

C. U. Coach Looks for Plenty of Aerial Action in Game With Detroit Friday.

(Editor's note: This is the first of a series of articles by coaches of District college football teams. Others will follow from time to time.)

By Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman.
(Head Coach, Catholic University.)

The thrill of football's forward pass in many ways is equivalent to that of baseball's home run.

BERGMAN.

A beautifully thrown ball speared in by a graceful receiver on the dead run ever has been a grandtreat. And many such treats are in store for fans attending Catholic University's colorful game with the University of Detroit at Griffith Stadium Friday night.

We at Catholic U. will not soon forget the aerial lesson Gus Dorais and his Detroit Titans taught us back in 1933. We thought we were pretty good then and started out like a million dollars in the direction of Detroit's goal posts.

Suddenly from nowhere a big chap named Doug Nott faded away and started pegging 'em. Try as we could that chap was not to be stopped and we wound up the game sadder, but far wiser, on the short end of a 26 to 0 score, the worst defeat of my regime at Catholic U.

We turned the tables on Detroit in 1935, 12 to 7, but memories of that 26 to 0 landslide still ride with us. To such an extent that we hope to be all in readiness for the invasion of another great tossing back, one Ernie Palumbro.

And I fear almost as much a second string passer, namely, one Roger Hayes. Ed LaFond, who scouted Detroit for us, tells me that Hayes pitches with his left hand and has plenty on the ball. A Loyola tossing southpaw, his name escapes me, gave us plenty of uneasy moments here a few weeks ago. And Hayes figures to be much better.

Don't get this Palumbro wrong

Redskins Seek $100,000 Policy For Baugh's Arm

The fine old Celtic hand of Jack Espey, publicity enterpreneur and general manager for the Washington Redskin grid professionals, was seen last night in the announcement that the club is asking Lloyds of London for a $100,000 insurance policy on the right arm of Sammy Baugh.

The Redskins have hit the rocky road of late—with the climax being last Sunday's defeat at the hands of the lowly Philadelphia Eagles and a subsequent drop in attendance to 9,000, the Redskins' lowest this season.

Sammy's right arm is worth a lot both to Sammy and to the Redskins—but whether it's worth the stiff premium that such a policy will entail is something that Mr. Espey himself would not comment on last night.

Anyhow—it's nice reading on rainy nights.

$35,000 Per Year Awarded to Pilot

Ruppert, Owner of Club, Breaks Own Rule in Giving Manager a Long Contract—Wilson Signs as Phils 1938 Manager.

By Leslie Avery,
United Press Staff Writer.

New York, Oct. 13.—Pudgy Joe McCarthy, baseball's most successful manager, signed a new contract today to pilot the World Champion New York Yankees for the next three years.

McCarthy, only man to manage pennant winners in both major leagues, signed for $35,000 a year, the salary he was reported to have drawn for the past two seasons.

The 50-year-old Irishman, who maneuvered his team to the world championship for two straight years, came to the Yankees in 1931 after leading the Chicago Cubs to the National League flag in 1929. In his seven years as manager of Col. Jacob Ruppert's team, he has won three pennants, three world titles, and never finished lower than second.

The contract was signed at Col. Ruppert's office today.

"I'm happy to have Joe back as manager," he said. "He has done a great job, and I am sure he will continue to do so."

Terry Gets More.

Bill Terry of the New York Giants is the only higher paid Major League manager, and part of his $40,000 salary is for running the Giants' farm clubs. McCarthy does not devote any of his time to the Yankees' Minor League farms.

Joe has been outstanding as a handler of men. He has taken a line-up filled with stars and made it function as a unit. While the newspaper headlines are crowded with the feats of individual Yanks, McCarthy treats them all alike in the dressing room and on the bench.

He is the hardest loser in baseball. A game lost on errors or bad judgment will keep him awake most of the night. He is even tempered for the most part and never rebukes a member of his team in public. Col. Ruppert named him a "team builder" when he was given the choice over Babe Ruth in selection of a Yankee manager.

Refused Joe Job.

Ironically, Joe's success as a pilot has been made with the club that once refused him a job. It was in 1914, a year after he broke in as manager of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., that McCarthy applied for a job as a player with the Yankees. The front office said "No" and Joe never did get to the majors as a player, but 16 years later he came back to manage the team after the mediocre showing of Bob Yawkey, who took over the reins at the death of Miller Huggins.

McCarthy thinks Lou Gehrig is the outstanding player of all time. His greatest thrill was in 1931 when the Yankees won the World Series with four straight victories over the Chicago Cubs. The Cubs had fired him in 1930!

Two Terp Coaches Are Real Brave Men

College Park, Oct. 13 (AP).—Now the coaches are getting into the game—but only in practice sessions.

Jack Faber and Al Heagy, assistant coaches at the University of Maryland, don their football togs and fill-in as centers during scrimmage every Thursday.

The regular centers—Bob Walton and Jim Forrester—are engineering students and must attend laboratory sessions on Thursday.

Russ Cohen Quits Cincinnati Post; Aide Takes Place

Cincinnati, Oct. 13 (AP).—President Raymond Walters of the University of Cincinnati, said tonight H. Russell (Russ) Cohen had resigned as head football coach and the athletic committee immediately named Line Coach Wade (Red) Woodworth in his place.

In a letter to Dr. Walters, Cohen blamed ill health and "my feeling that the best interest of the team and the university would be served by an immediate change in the coaching situation." He recommended Woodworth to succeed him.

Cohen came to the Bearcats' staff in 1935 from Vanderbilt University. He held a three-year contract.

Helen Hicks Wins Her First Match

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 13 (AP).—Helen Hicks, New York business woman golfer, whose 71 yesterday won the medal in the Texas Women's Open Golf tournament, led the rain-soaked field into the second round today with an 8-and-6 victory over 14-year-old Alice Daniels, of Fort Worth.

Pirates Buy Rizzo.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 13 (AP).—The Pirates announced tonight the purchase of Johnny Rizzo, hard-hitting outfielder with the Columbus, Ohio, team of the American Association.

Wilson Signed.

Philadelphia, Oct. 13 (AP).—Jimmy Wilson signed today to manage the Philadelphia National League Baseball Team for the fifth consecutive season, ending rumors that he would be dismissed.

Gerald P. Nugent, club president, said the contract was for one year. The terms were not disclosed.

Miss Brown, Mrs. Stern Vie Today in Mid-Atlantic Golf Semifinals

Mrs. Morrow Renews Feud With Meckley

Defending Champ Only Outsider Surviving Torrid Play.

A pair of extra hole victors, Miss Marion Brown and Mrs. Charlotte Stern, will clash in the Middle Atlantic semifinals today at Indian Spring, in the upper bracket, while the other match is a renewal of the Mrs. Meckley-Mrs. Morrow feud, for a berth in the title round.

Mrs. Stern, upset victor over Helen Dettweiler on Tuesday went 23 holes yesterday before Ellen Kincaid bowed, after topping a wood shot and losing to a regulation five.

Mrs. Morrow, defending champion, is the lone outsider in the championship flight, and stands between an all Indian Spring final, as three of the four remaining players hail from the host club.

Miss Brown, medalist, came from behind to oust the host southpaw ace, Mrs. Karl Giles, after the latter led by a hole at the turn. Mrs. Giles again assumed the lead on the thirteenth, but the match was even at the end of the long sixteenth.

They halved the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth with pars and the nienteenth in fives before the medalist won with a five on the second extra holes after both failed to reach the green in four shots.

Meckley Out in 41.

Mrs. Meckley, 5 and 3 winner over Mrs. George Hussey, Army and Navy, was out in 41 with a five on the ninth hole and led by three up. The winner was three over par on the back nine in closing the match on the fifteenth hole with a regulation par five.

Mrs. Morrow, Elkridge's defending titleholder, overcame an early lead by Mrs. Walter Stokes of the host club, and went in front by a single hole at the turn. The Baltimorean supplied the winning punch on the thirteenth and fourteenth holes and halved through sixteen for the victory.

The marathon battle between Mrs. Stern and Ellen Kincaid, that finally ended on the twenty-third hole, was apparently to be an easy victory, for the former as she led by three holes at the fourth.

Miss Kincaid came back to square the issue on the twelfth and take a lead on the next hole. Mrs. Stern pulled even on the seventeenth and they halved the next to end the regulation distance all even. Each missed several winning opportunities through the four extra holes, with the Congressional star's missed wood shot on the fifth providing the winning margin for the home member.

First Flight.

Marion Brown (Manor) defeated Mrs. K. F. Giles (Indian Spring), 1 up, 20 holes; Mrs. Charlotte Stern (Indian Spring) defeated Miss Ellen Kincaid (Congressional), 1 up, 23 holes; Mrs. Betty Meckley (Indian Spring) defeated Mrs. G. F. Hussey (Army and Navy), 5 and 3; Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow (Elkridge) defeated Mrs. Walter Stokes (Indian Spring), 3 and 2.

Second Flight.

Mrs. N. E. Weasells (Roanoke) defeated Mrs. E. M. Amick (Columbia), 3 and 2; Mrs. Florence Godfrey (Beaver Dam) defeated Mrs. Merrill Lord (Columbia), 3 and 2; Mrs. J. F. Dowdall (Congressional) defeated Mrs. C. A. Stewart (Congressional), 4 and 2; Miss K. Heuisler (Rolling Road) defeated Mrs. C. L. Miller (A. N.), 3 and 2.

Third Flight.

Mrs. Gale E. Pugh (Manor) defeated Mrs. F. L. Lewis (Congressional), 4 and 2; Mrs. Shinkler won by default.

Consolations.

First flight—Mrs. T. J. Johnson (Army and Navy) defeated Mrs. Myron Davy (Congressional), 6 and 4; Mrs. Helen Dettweiler (Congressional) defeated Mrs. Pray (Manor), 2 and 1; Mrs. H. J. Simons (Manor) won by default; Mrs. Roland MacKenzie (Congressional) defeated Mrs. R. L. Rose (Congressional), 4 and 3.

Second flight—Mrs. Hope Wilkinson (Indian Spring) defeated Mrs. George Goetzmann (Congressional), 5 and 3; Mrs. Douglas Tschiffeley (Washington) defeated Mrs. V. A. Weiss (Congressional), 4 and 2; Mrs. F. D. Letts (Chevy Chase) defeated Mrs. J. T. Powell (Manor), 3 and 2; Mrs. H. A. Knox (Congressional) defeated Mrs. James Hill, Jr., 3 and 2.

Third flight—Mrs. Merrillatt (Washington) defeated Mrs. A. Gardiner (Columbia), 3 and 2; Mrs. H. A. Mihills (Manor) defeated Mrs. Briggs Simpich (Columbia), 3 and 2.

Pairings.

10:00, Miss Brown vs. Mrs. Stern; 10:10, Mrs. Meckley vs. Mrs. Morrow; 10:20, Mrs. Weasells vs. Mrs. Godfrey; 10:30, Mrs. Dowdall vs. Miss Heuisler; 9:45, Mrs. Pugh vs. Mrs. Shinkler; 10:05, Miss Johnson vs. Miss Dettweiler; 10:15, Mrs. Simons vs. Mrs. MacKenzie; 10:25, Mrs. Wilkinson vs. Mrs. Tschiffeley; 10:35, Mrs. Letts vs. Mrs. Knox.

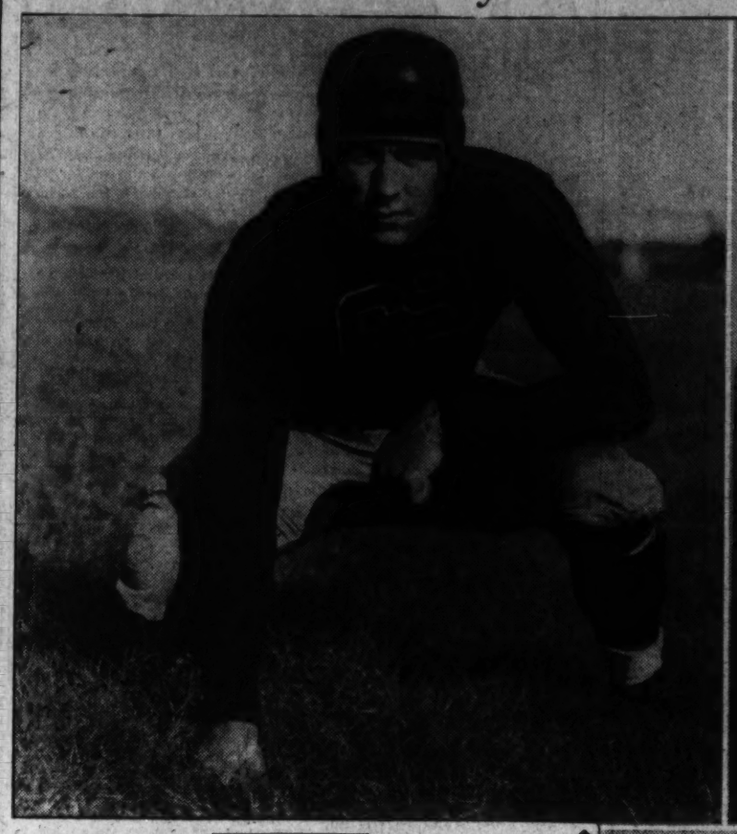
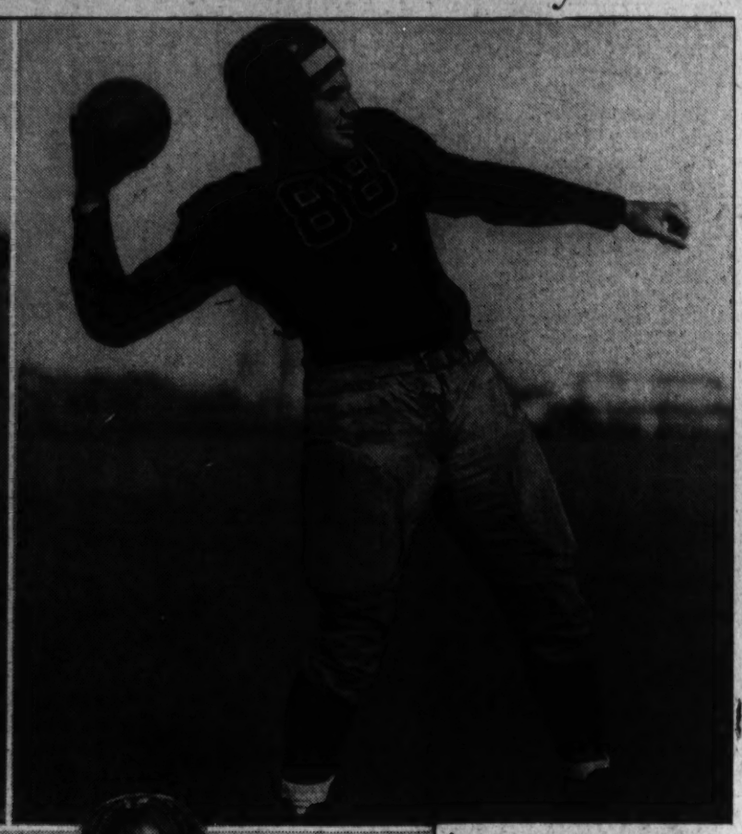
This Trio of Navy Stalwarts Will Battle Harvard on Saturday





Simple, Direct Strategy Is Aim of Navy Coach

Hardwick Will Just 'Put in Strongest Team and Keep Going;' Strong Defense Believed to Be Vigorous Defense; Ingram Will Play.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Oct. 13.—Coach Hank Hardwick's strategy for the Navy-Harvard game in Baltimore Saturday will be of the simplest and most direct kind, according to the statement made by him this afternoon.

"I will put the strongest team I have in the field at the start, hit as hard as we can at once and keep going with the same team as long as possible."

The Navy director does not believe in two or more definitely organized teams or in starting off with a second string. He believes that "the strongest defense is a vigorous offense," and this principle will be applied in Saturday's game. Subs, he said, would be by individuals and small groups.

However, that does not mean that there will be less effort to prepare for Harvard's passing game. Practice along this line was continued in the secret practice of this afternoon, with the B squad in Harvard formations.

Dick Shaffer, a stripling who came up from the plebes of last year, was taking the place of Arthur Oakes, and taking it well enough to drop a lot of long passes in the arms of waiting backs or ends of his own side. The defense of the varsity was by no means good.

Ingram to Start.

Bill Ingram, injured in the Virginia game, is making good progress, and is likely to take the field tomorrow. He will probably get some playing against Harvard, but Lem Cooke, on the basis of his fine running, passing and kicking in The Citadel and Virginia games, will start.

Heber Player is showing a slight edge over Dick Gunderson at left guard, the one position as to which there has been any doubt this week. The edge is the slightest, however, both being powerful and alert players, weighing, according to official figures, 198 pounds each. Player is Navy's heavyweight wrestler and captain of the team in that sport.

Secret practice is also on the cards for tomorrow, but on Friday, for a short time at least the gates will swing open wide enough to allow the Midshipmen to swarm in and pep things up as only the regiment can.

The regiment, the whole local Navy contingent, adjourns to Baltimore on Saturday and the Baltimore Stadium becomes the Naval Academy campus for the day.

Here's One Putter That's on the Level

Omaha, Nebr., Oct. 13 (A.P.).—A putter level was Bart Milatzo's contribution today to the golfer who has been missing those easy shots.

Milatzo got tired of watching his putts curve gently awaye from the cup after lining up carefully, so he purchased a carpenter's bubble level and had it inserted in the shaft of his putter.

Now, said Milatzo, he places his putter along the projected path of the ball and gets a pretty good idea how to play the slope of the green.

Recreation League Pin Records Fall

Four seasonal records were established in the Recreation Bowling League last night in matches rolled in the Recreeation alleys. The marks made were for high game, 164 by Gerald Small; high set, 422, by Cliff Hollis; high team game, 656, by Marvin's Credit, and high team set, 1,825, by Marlboro Hotel.

Marlboro Hotel, aided by the big set and by Joe Harrison's 400 and Mandley's 397 sets swept three games from Terry's Home Appliance Co., to take first place in the league.

In other matches, Blaydes Contracting Co. took a 2-to-1 decision from Marvin's Credit and Allie Roofing won the odd game from the Bureau of Investigation.

Wright Sets Pin Mark.

American Security & Trust No. 1, led by Al Wright, stole the honors in Bankers League bowling matches rolled last night at the Arcadia Alleys.

Wright spilled the maples for a new individual record of 400 and also won the high individual game laurels with 148. American Security & Trust No. 1, took high game and high team sets with 618 and 1,704 respectively.

When Harvard and Navy clash in Baltimore Saturday afternoon, this trio of Naval Academy boys will find plenty to keep them busy for approximately 60 minutes. Upper left is J. F. Fike, one of the best ends in recent Navy history. Upper right is R. J. Antrim, a clever, fast back. Lower center is Lem Cooke, of Hernando, Miss., who is taking the place of Bill Ingram, who was recently injured.

Pimlico Revives Manly Handicap; 46 Are Nominated

Baltimore, Oct. 13 (A.P.).—The $5,000 Manly Handicap Steeplechase, to be revived at Pimlico November 8 after a lapse of six years, drew 46 nominations, the Maryland Jockey Club announced today.

Twenty-six stables nominated for the 2½-mile event for 4-year-olds and upward. Included are Greentree Stable's Sailor Beware and Jungle King; Thomas Hitchcock's Annibal and Yemassee; Mrs. M. MacNeille's St. Francis and F. Ambrose Clark's London Town.

This running will be the seventeenth. The Manly was run first in 1916 and was discontinued in 1931.

Biscayne Blue Breaks Fast to Take Laurel Handicap by Two Lengths

Winner Pays His Backers $23.50Price

Conquer Runs Second and Knight Warrior Grabs Show Money.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Oct. 13.—Winning his sixth race of the year in 16 starts, Biscayne Blue gave his backers no anxious moments today. The St. James gelding had speed to meet all challengers and seemed to have something in reserve as he came on to the imaginary line two lengths in advance of Conquer. Knight Warrior was third most of the way and finished in that position.

The race was the Grade B Handicap, a struggle of one mile and seventy yards which, after numerous scratches, drew a field of six of the better routers here.

Biscayne Blue lost no time in getting to the front and was steadied along while Golden Era and Knight Warrior battled along within striking distance. However, there was no stop in Biscayne Blue's make-up today. He had a two-length margin entering the stretch and held it to the end. Conquer, slow to get under, closed with good speed, but was held perfectly safe.

Pays Backers $23.50.

The afternoon was far from comfortable for the 6,500 customers. Rain fell intermittently and the track was slowing as the program progressed.

There was warmth for those who bet on Biscayne Blue for the gelding paid $23.50. He was Jockey Leonard Turner's first winning mount since his spill at Havre de Grace in which he suffered a broken collarbone.

Paying a $29.40 mutuel and apparently beaten with the field mid-way of the stretch, Actress, owned by A. C. Rose, turned on the heat in time to take a neck decision in the first race. Droop and Paper Drop chased the winner to the wire. Basil James turned in a sparkling stretch ride on the winner.

W. F. Hitt's horses have had a habit of finishing second this year. Spring Meadow, a gelding juvenile, changed the luck in the second event. After having been a "bride's maid" five times this year, Spring Meadow defeated Tiger Teddy, the favorite, after the judges had examined the picture. The gelding paid $8.20.

Gold Spray, running in the colors of C. B. Strum, took third race at a $24.80 mutuel and won by a head over another long shot. Bernard Bond's Pretty Lass. Both horses are graduates of the half mile tracks. Zembla, the favorite, finished third after racing wide the entire trip of a mile and a sixteenth.

Winning her third straight race, Baby Way, a westerner, stepped to the wire a length in advance of Light Chatter in the fourth event in which Silver Braid was third. Baby Way and Light Chatter were most prominent from the start and the former had the most stretch punch. The winner returned a $7.50 mutuel.

Picking Winners Easy for Divvy Dan.

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

New York, Oct. 13 (UP.).—The fugitive football prognosticator.

Several of the Nation's most respected authorities already have branded the current football season the screwiest campaign in grid history, although we're just approaching the third big week-end.

Their wails go winging o'er the land as they lament that "form" has lost all significance. Unfortunates who must attempt to pick week-end winners approach their typewriters quaking like "smoke" drinkers from the Bowery.

* * * *

Not so with Divvy Dan, the dizzy divinating man! Not so with the bewhiskered fugitive from a sanitarium's brain gang! The immortal words of two standout old-time word-slingers apply directly to Divvy. Alexander Pope wrote: "For fools rush in where angels fear to tread." And Shakespeare said, "Wrens make prey where eagles dare not perch."

* * * *

Hence you can understand why Dippy Divvy has the effrontery to send in from his hideout another list of football picks, chuckling meanwhile at the futile search of keepers and police. Last week Divvy used an "ectoplasm telescope" in making his forecasts. An arsenic cocktail would have been better for him and the world. He registered 39 right, 15 wrong and 5 ties, for a right and wrong average of .722. It was his worst week in any season and it pared down his 1937 average to .757.

* * * *

East.

Pittsburgh over Fordham—May be their third straight 0-0 tie.

Yale over Army—Cadets' line was unimpressive against Columbia.

Navy over Harvard—Middies have slight edge.

Cornell over Syracuse—Closer than it looks.

Georgia over Holy Cross—Bulldogs too strong.

Detroit over Catholic U.—Another close one.

Notre Dame over Carnegie Tech., Colgate over Tulane, Manhattan over Villanova, Columbia over Pennsylvania, N. Y. U. over St. John, Penn State over Lehigh, Dartmouth over Brown, Bucknell over Miami, Duquesne over St. Vincent.

* * * *

Midwest.

Minnesota over Michigan—Wolverines third straight defeat.

Northwestern over Purdue—Boilermakers unimpressive with Carnegie.

Nebraska over Oklahoma, Iowa State over Kansas, Michigan State over Missouri, Princeton over Chicago, Kansas State over Marquette, De Paul over North Dakota.

* * * *

South.

Alabama over Tennessee—Hold your breath.

Georgia Tech. over Duke—Keep holding it.

Louisiana State over Mississippi—Tougher than it looks.

Mississippi State over Auburn—Anything can happen here.

Florida over Sewanee, V. M. I. over Richmond, Furman over Citadel, North Carolina State over V. P. I., South Carolina over Davidson, Maryland over Virginia, North Carolina over Wake Forest, Kentucky over Washington and Lee.

* * * *

Pacific Coast.

Oregon State over U. C. L. A.—Beavers' teeth getting stronger.

Washington over Washington State—Huskies on the rebound.

Southern California over Oregon—After hard fight.

California over College of Pacific and California Aggies (2 games), Santa Clara over Portland, St. Mary's over Loyola.

* * * *

Southwest.

Baylor over Centenary—Might be a tie.

Arkansas over Texas—Slight margin.

Texas A. and M. over Texas Christian—Aggies are the class.

Tulsa over Rice—Using Oklahoma as indicator.

Vanderbilt over Southern Methodist—Commodores more certain.

or sell him short. Last week he passed to one touchdown after another as Detroit mopped up with a much heavier Texas Tech, 34 to 0. This is the same Texas Tech that bowled over Sammy Baugh and his Texas Christian U. pals a year ago. Palumbro also was the audacious sophomore who tossed to touchdowns against Duquesne after the "Dukes" had upset Rose Bowl Champion Pitt.

I'm not going too much into detail here. They tell me Detroit has seven available passers, but that doesn't bother us much. If our pass defense holds up we will have something to say about the aerial game ourselves.

In Burke Vidhovic we have one of the classiest little ball tossers I've ever coached. And Charley Munhall also can hold down his end. Joe Guyon and Johnny Fiorellino both can toss a long ball when necessary and we have several others who can fit into the aerial scheme of things.

Twin Threats in Backfield of Pittsburgh Pros

Izzy Weinstock (left), and "Bull" Karcis tote the ball in tandem formation for the Pittsburgh Pirates. Weinstock, a Pitt All-American, and Karcis, rated the greatest fullback in Carnegie Tech history, will be marked men when the Pirates take the field against the Redskins here Sunday.

Pirates Bring Outstanding Backs Sunday

Karcis and Weinstock, Tops in College, to Face Redskins.

College heroes whose names used to leave Pittsburgh cheer leaders and student bodies with exaggerated cases of hoarseness, will be in the backfield of the Pittsburgh Pirates on Sunday at Griffith Stadium.

When the Pittsburgh pros take the field against Washington's Redskins, two home-grown products of the Smoky City will be in Pirate regalia—two guys who were tops as college heroes.

They are Isadore (Izzy) Weinstock, line-crashing, fancy-stepping fullback for the University of Pittsburgh, and John (Bull) Karcis, who performed the same duties for Carnegie Tech when that college was a power in Eastern football.

The 212-pound Weinstock, rated at the greatest of a long line of Pittsburgh fullbacks, unlike Karcis, does not confine his ball-toting to the line-smashing methods, but utilizes his speed with such effect that he is ranked as one of the league's most dangerous broken field or climax runners.

The more compactly-built Karcis, who graduated from Carnegie three years before Weinstock got his diploma at Pitt, similarly holds the rank as Carnegie's greatest fullback. Before joining up with the Pirates this season, Karcis carried the ball four years for Brooklyn teams in the pro league.

Both the Pirates and the Redskins are on the rebound from galling defeats last Sunday—when Pittsburgh was unable to hold a 3-0 lead and took a 7-3 beating from the Detroit Lions, and the Redskins, in something of a debacle, were bumped off by the lowly Philadelphia Eagles.

Still raging over that defeat, Coach Ray Flaherty, of the Redskins, continued to drive his athletes in a scrimmage yesterday. Nettled by the failure of his running attack to score a single touchdown in four games this season, Flaherty is virtually committed to at least one change in his backfield.

The change may see Don Irwin, heretofore rated as regular fullback, lifted in favor of Max Krause. Irwin, the team's best runner earlier in the season, has been unable to untrack himself in late games. Flaherty considers Krause the better blocker.

Sports Postscripts

JOE COX, who wrestles BILLY HANSON here tonight in the new style of wrestling, six rounds of 10 minutes each, is no novice at the innovation . . . he did a lot of it in Australia, where it originated . . . If he wins, he is scheduled to get a crack at JIM LONDOS, here, soon, and wrestle the same style . . . but JIM is the boy who can show him a few things about it, because he is the one who has popularized it throughout the world, Australia, South Africa, Europe and now the United States . . . here's a cute one . . . DEAN DETTON, the great big mean wrestler, also on the card, is a wiz at the Big Apple . . . he should be able to truck, shouldn't he? . . . when BOBBY NOLAN, Georgetown quarterback, was injured in the scrimmage with the Redskins, Tuesday, he was about the only one that didn't know his leg was fractured . . . when he heard the crack, he said to himself, "Gosh, there goes somebody's leg, poor fellow." . . . next thing he knew he was being toted off to the hospital . . . both bones in his left leg snapped . . .

GARRISON.

LOU GEVINSON, who earns a living punching fellows in the 126-pound vicinity into submission, is also quite a football player . . . before he gave up the gridiron game to concentrate on boxing, he was quarterback of the potent Northeast Boys Club Eleven, which was just about tops in the 135-pound class . . . he also is a follower of the game as played by colleges . . . speaking of following the college games, who isn't? . . . have you noticed the terrific pitch that football interest has reached this season? . . . it has hit what must be a zenith and at the rate it's been rising, may be heading for a big letdown . . . talk about a helping hand . . . ART STICKLEY, Clarendon, Va., attorney, certainly comes under the heading of that—to the sports writers . . . he tabulates statistics splendidly for local college games and has for many years . . .

It's a seven-week old girl that has the DORSEY GRIFFITHS (he's the C. U. track coach) bubbling over at present . . . DORSEY, incidentally, has completed his board track at Catholic University after five years of hard labor and will dedicate it sometime this month . . . JOE HOLMAN, when talking about unsuccessful coaches, reminds one of the answer that MILLER HUGGINS, great New York Yankee manager, made when asked what made great managers . . . Huggins' answer, made at the time when the Yanks were riding high years ago, was a pithy three-word retort . . . "Great ball clubs."

BOB GARRISON.

LaSalle's Guard Gets Suspension For Wrong Tackle

Philadelphia, Oct. 13 (AP).—Instead of praise from the coach for making a good tackle, Frank Loughney, sophomore guard at LaSalle, has drawn indefinite suspension from Coach Marty Brill.

The reason is that Loughney made the tackle when he was supposed to be on the bench with an injured ankle during LaSalle's game with Catholic University. He rushed out and downed Vic Sochon and his team drew a penalty for having a twelfth man in action.

Shamrocks Lose To Los Angeles

Boston, Oct. 13 (AP).—Los Angeles' undefeated Bulldogs gained their fourth American Professional Football League triumph tonight by outplaying the Boston Shamrocks for a 14-to-0 decision before a slim crowd of 2,000 under the lights at Fenway Park.

The West Coasters scored in the first and final periods, and miscues by Bill Pendergast paved the way for both touchdowns. Shortly after the opening kick-off, Pendergast's fumble was recovered by Pete Mahringer on Boston's 31-yard line and Ed (Crazy Legs) Stark raced inside his left tackle and then cut back before starting a scoring jaunt. Gordon Gore place-kicked the extra point.

Potomac Club Elects.

At a semi-annual meeting held last night for the purpose of electing float officers, the Potomac Boat Club named the following men for the ensuing year: Captain, David Max, re-elected by unanimous vote; first lieutenant, Joe Stuart, and second lieutenant, George Shorb.

Artist's Prince Wins.

Newmarket, England, Oct. 13 (U.P.). Artist's Prince, a 13-1 shot owned by Maj. R. B. Glover, won today's running of the Cambridgeshire stakes.

Miller Suspension Upheld by Fathers

Providence, R. I., Oct. 13 (AP).—The Virginia Boxing Commission's suspension of "Chief" Baby Miller will stand in all States and territories where commissions are affiliated with the National Boxing Association, Edward C. Foster, executive secretary, ruled today.

4 Grapplers Try for Shot At Ex-Champ

Cox, Hanson, Kashey, Detton in Double Windup Tonight.

Wrestling impresario Joe Turner tonight will attempt to unearth an opponent for Jim Londos in his double windup matches, pitting Dynamite Joe Cox against Billy Hanson and Dean Detton, former champion, against Abe Kashy at Turner's Arena.

Londos has promised the promoter he will come to Washington, and Turner will not arrange a match until he has a suitable opponent.

Indications are that the winners of tonight's double star bouts will meet next week, and the victor in that bout will go against Londos.

The ole faithful tonight will see something different in the Cox-Hanson match, a rematch by popular demand. Instead of the customary one-fall to a finish, the grapplers will clash over the six-round route, with 10 minutes for each round, and a minute's rest between rounds.

Cyclone Burns, the fat Baltimorean, or Jennah Bortnick, the watermelon king, will render the decision.

This round-by-round system was started in Australia, and popularized by Jim Londos. When Londos wrestles here, that system will be used.

Detton returned from the Pacific Coast last week, and in his first appearance at the arna in nine months stopped Billy Hanson. Detton, once a dour wrestler, flashed plenty of color and showmanship, and that is why the promoter is booking him for a return engagement.

Villains clash in the 30-minute supporting bouts. Karl Davis meets Casey Berger, Walter Podolok tangles with Jim Wallace, and Bill Sledge meets Jake Patterson. First bout is at 8:30.

Heavy Exports Raise Wheat After Slump

Sales of North American Wheat Abroad Estimated at 1,250,000 Bushels.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Rescued by substantial export business, the Chicago wheat market scored material gains late today after many wild fluctuations and reaching season new low price records.

More than 1,250,000 bushels of North American wheat were estimated to have been purchased today for shipment overseas, together with about 250,000 bushels of United States rye, and 1,000,000 bushels of United States barley. The greater part of the wheat taken for export from North America was domestic hard winter.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅝@1⅜, cents above Monday's finish, December 97⅛@97⅝, May 98¾@99, July 92¼@93⅛; corn 1½@2¼ advanced, December 58¾@58⅞, May 60⅛@60¼, July 61; oats unchanged to ⅛ up, December 29⅛@29¼, and rye showing ⅝@1 cent bulge, December 71⅝. The provisions outcome was 5 cents lower to 10 cents higher.

General Tire Votes Special 50c Dividend

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 13 (AP).—W. O'Neil, president of the General Tire & Rubber Co., announced today that directors had declared a special dividend of 50 cents per share on common stock, payable November 10 to stockholders of record October 29.

Cherry-Burrell Extra.

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—Cherry-Burrell Corporation, manufacturer of machinery and supplies for the dairy industry, announced an extra dividend of 25 cents and a quarterly dividend of 35 cents on the cotton stock and the regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 on the preferred, all payable October 25 to stock of record October 21.

Howard B. Blanchard,

Newly appointed Washington representative of the Union Pacific Railroad.

Cotton Rallies Over $2 a Bale

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—Cotton rallied more than $2 a bail today on more active trade and Wall Street buying while contracts were scarce. December rose from 8.02 to 8.42, and closed at 8.40, with final prices 44 to 48 points net higher.

Opening advances of 8 to 10 points were in partial response to firm foreign markets over Tuesday's holiday here. Except for a moderate accumulation of hedge selling, Southern offerings were light and selling from other sources was limited. Foreign interests were fairly good buyers. The market turned sharply firmer in the afternoon on covering, trade and new outside buying.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil was more active and prices firmer today on increased covering and commission house buying promoted by the advance in cotton and reports Government agencies would buy part of the surplus stocks of refined and crude oil for relief. Final prices were around the best of the day and 21 to 24 points net higher. Sales were 345 contracts. The Census Bureau placed the disappearance of oil in September at 394,000 barrels, against 316,781 in August, while the visible supply increased to 1,737,600 barrels, against 1,100,500 at the end of August. British Blame Wall Street for Stock Slump

Say London Efforts to Bid Up Stocks Nullified by New York.

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 13.—British brokers today accused Wall Street operators of causing an international break in security prices. They advanced manifold reasons why London was not guilty of starting the steep price slide, but they confessed that they were unable to give a conclusive explanation of why the slump started and why it continues.

They insist, however, that nearly every recent break stemmed from Wall Street and the London security market was forced to follow. On several occasions, they added, the London market bid up prices before Wall Street opened and then got its fingers burned when Wall Street started business at lower levels.

Tuesday's market was cited as an example of what London could do when Wall Street was closed for a holiday. The London exchange took courage from continental buying and rebounded strongly late yesterday afternoon, wiping out a sharp morning break.

Earlier this year the financial centers of London, Paris and Amsterdam sent money in great volume to the United States for investment because of the greater safety offered there. Later some of this money started returning home when the domestic situation looked better than the American scene.

Selling Increases.

The volume of selling swelled when Wall street declined and signalled their money was endangered. About that time, commodity dealers in Amsterdam, London and other centers encountered rapidly falling prices which forced them to sell securities in London and New York to enable them to accumulate cash to tide them over the break.

French investors, for many months, have been rushing their money into New York and London to sidestep the declining value of the franc. Now the franc has reached at least a temporary resting place and French politics has not indicated a radical turn to the left, so a heavy repatriation of French funds is under way. Each successive wave of international selling accelerated the homeward flow of money.

Some of the deepest drops in London were caused by selling from Amsterdam of even gilt-edged bonds which were dumped on the market for cash to be used in the wild scramble to meet commitments in falling commodities.

The widespread United States interests which came to London when Federal restrictions were placed on Wall street have been adding to the decline. Many of them have been selling and British market operations followed their lead on the theory they ought to know the United States market better than anyone else.

The Market

Stocks Break in Heavy Selling and Make Partial Recovery at Close.

New York, Oct. 13.—Stocks had another tough break—confirmation of the special session foreboding—but after heavy selling before noon had ceased they were granted an afternoon of comparative peace. Best prices were paid at the opening and closing quotations were lower in the majority of issues on a day's turnover of 2,600,000 shares, the largest since March 11. Sales of 1,380,000 to noon were the largest for that period in more than seven months, and the 800,000 share volume of the second hour was the greatest (on a falling market) in several years.

At the best the leading issues were up 3 points and at the worst they were down 1 to 3 points under the opening. United States bonds dropped and other descriptions weakened with stocks. Commodities were mixed. December wheat rose 1⅛ cents to 97¾ cents a bushel.

It was not surprising that the opening response of the stock market to the extra session of Congress called by President Roosevelt was moderately higher prices. The extra session has been a cloud over the market for a long time—ever since the adjournment last summer—and the call became a virtual certainty several days ago. The market has had ample time to discount that unfavorable development, and undoubtedly it has done so. Whether it has done so sufficiently remains to be seen, and rumor is bound to play a part, as, for example, the report that the President will take advantage of the special session to propose a big armament expenditure as a possible fillip to sagging business.

Reason for Dislike.

The President himself recognized the fact that another session of Congress in near future is unwelcome for he insisted that the business world is wrong in so regarding a meeting of Congress. It isn't Congress per se that makes business sick in anticipation; it is the "must" program prepared for Congress by the President. First on the program is another scheme for fixing farm products prices, bound to fail no matter what it is, and bound to cost taxpayers and consumers millions. Next is the hours and wages fixing bill, which promises further to unsettle business by giving it more rigid costs. For the rest, the prospect of increased taxation is exceptionally bright—far brighter than is the outlook for a commonsense revision of such unsound taxes as the capital gains tax and the undistributed profits tax.

Autumn Cleaning.

However, Wall Street recognizes the comfort given the Executive by the mere presence in Washington of Congress, a body containing his best friends and greatest admirers, and if it must be prepared to go through a period of wild legislative proposals and queer speeches, it may have the compensation of some straight talking. The President is right in suggesting that a Congress in the autumn will be less restive than a Congress in the spring. If only Congress at the special session this autumn would rake up and burn all the dead leaves and rotten vegetation so carelessly planted in the spring!

Margin Selling.

Those who had received urgent calls to put up more margin, whether they lived in those sections of the country recently visited by President Roosevelt, or were denizens of the President's own home town, couldn't quite see the point of the story that they should not sell just because a special session of Congress is coming. They had the choice of finding more money or letting their brokers sell for them, and it was partly the liquidation of undermargined accounts that brought on the sharp break in prices in the second hour.

Ticker Confusion.

The best prices of the day, set at the opening, or shortly afterward, called out a good deal of selling and their failure to loosen soon turned the advance into a retreat. At the worst on the morning fall the prices for many leading issues were not down much from the previous closing quotations, but they were 2 to 5 points under the morning tops. The fact that the ticker fell behind, added to the appearance of weakness. By the time shorts had begun to cover and other supporting purchase orders had helped to rally the market, the ticker was running 8 minutes, recorded, behind—that is to say, about 11 minutes behind actual floor trading. Under such circumstances no one could have much idea of what the market actually was at the time.

Steels and Metals Rally.

After the break to new low levels in two years the stock list recovered through the lunch hour and prices held fairly steady in the afternoon moderately above the low points but under the previous closing quotations for a majority of issues. Steel and a few leaders managed to rally to show a gain of 1 to 2 points on the day, but their performance was the exception. The tone was reassuringly better throughout the afternoon dealings, but confidence had received too severe a jolt to give traders any stomach for consistent buying.

In the list of stocks which emerged from the selling wave with losses of 1 to 4 points were Gypsum, Timken Rubber, Owens Glass, Caterpillar, General Motors, General Foods, Eastman Kodak, Youngstown, Zenith Radio, Westinghouse, Chrysler, Vulcan, Columbian Carbon, American Agricultural Chemical, Santa Fe, Auburn, Manville, Telephone, American News, Crucible, Crane, Crossley and Continental Steel. In the class of 5 to 9 points were Case, duPont, Allied Chemical and a few preferred stocks. In addition to Steel, improvement was shown by American Metals, New York Central (after an early bad break), Anaconda, National Steel and Bethlehem. Most of the hardening was confined to the steel and metal groups.

Late Ticker.

At its worst, shortly before noon, the ticker tape was running about 11 minutes behind the actual floor trading on the stock exchange. It was reported as 8 minutes late for about a 10-minute period, but the usual lag between ticker prices and floor prices is 2 to 3 minutes. It has been two years since the stock ticker has fallen so far behind as that. In November, 1935, the ticker one day fell behind 10 minutes. Sales volume was not extra large, but apparently the reporting facilities were not geared up to a sudden burst of activity.

London.

The story went the rounds here that the rally in "international" shares in London yesterday, while our market was closed, grew out of the rumor that settlement day for London trading in American stocks was to be changed to correspond with the practice here. Delivery here comes on the third day instead of every two weeks, as is the case in London.

Orval Adams, Utah Banker, Heads A. B. A.

P.A.Benson, Brooklyn, and R. M. Hanes, Winston-Salem, Vice Presidents.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Oct. 13.—Orval W. Adams, 53, Salt Lake City banker, whose entire banking career has been spent in Utah, today was elected president of the American Bankers Association at its sixty-third annual convention. He succeeds Tom K. Smith, of St. Louis.

Philip A. Benson, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was elected first vice president, and Robert M. Hanes, of Winston-Salem, N. C., was named second vice president.

Adams is executive vice president of the Utah State National Bank. For the last year he has been first vice president of the association.

The new first vice president is president and trustee of the Dime Savings Bank of Brooklyn. He is a native of New York City and became associated with his bank in 1917. He is a former president of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks.

Hanes is president of the Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. of Winston-Salem and is a native of that city. He is a past president of the North Carolina Bankers Association. Adams and Benson are Republicans. Hanes is a Democrat.

Nominated From Floor.

Adams was started on the presidency trail by a nomination from the convention floor two years ago—a procedure rarely successful in the organization.

At the association's convention in New Orleans in 1935 Adams was proposed for the office of the second vice president by a nomination from the floor after the nominating committee had named another banker. So strong was the sentiment for the far-Westerner that his opponent withdrew in the interest of harmony and Adams was elected. His selection today climaxed a steady rise in the association.

Adams is a former president of the Utah Bankers Association. He was a member of the former code committee of the American Bankers Association and served as chairman of the association's bank management commission from 1934 to 1935. For the past year he has been first vice president of the association.

Adams is married and has six sons. He is a Republican and a member of the Sigma Chi Fraternity.

N. Y. Curb Hits Lows for Year

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—Curb stocks bogged down on all fronts today. While declines in most shares were confined to fractions, many issues hit new 1937 bottoms. Here and there individual issues broke sharply, however, with losses ranging to around 8 points.

Sales mounted to 605,000 shares, the biggest turnover since March 11, and compared with 359,000 shares Monday.

Newmont Mining sagged 8 points at 62. Aluminum Co. of America was 3¾ lower at 97. Down fractions to a point were Pan-American Airways at 20, Pennroad, 2¾; St. Regis Paper, 3⅛, and Columbia Oil & Gasoline, 4.

Resisting the trend, Cord Corporation closed up ¼ at 2⅜, and McWilliams Dredging up ½ at 14½, and Lake Shore Mines up ⅜ at 48.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 13.—The stock market closed strong and active with a demand for securities in practically all sections of the list. Transatlantic shares maintained their earlier strength and foreign bonds were higher. Industrials were in good demand, especially tobacco, rayon and shipping shares. Fill-edged issues and home rails sold higher.

Paris—Industrial stock continued firm in the bourse, although the remainder of the list was mixed. Rentes closed with net gains of 25 to 40 centimes and Royal Dutch moved 266 francs higher. Suez Canal lost 95 francs. International issues moved irregularly.

Liverpool—After opening steady and higher, wheat futures broke sharply on the general weakness in North American markets and closed 9d to 1⅛d down. Cotton futures closed very steady at net advances of 4 to 6 points. Tuesday's sharp rally attracted scattered hedging and straddle selling, but the offerings were absorbed by trade and local interests.

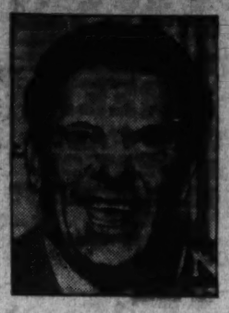
Bob Burns Says—



Most of the terrible gossip and rumors you hear about people start from somebody who don't even know the victim. That's the reason people shouldn't talk about things they don't understand. Nine times out of ten, they get the wrong slant on it.

Uncle Slug was lookin' at the paper one day that had a picture of a big, beautiful ship on a calm ocean. He couldn't read or write and he was holdin' the paper upside down. He hated to let people know he was ignorant so when a fella asked him what was the news Uncle Slug said, "Oh, it's terrible! There musta been a thousand lives lost! There was a big storm at sea and it turned a big steam boat topsy-turvy."

Postmasters Urged to Seek Civil Service

Ramspeck Tells Session McKellar Is Delaying Bill in Senate.

Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Commission yesterday urged the delegates attending the thirty-second convention of the National League of District Postmasters to enlist the support of their Congressmen to place postmasters of the first, second and third class under civil service status.

The postmaster bill, which has been pigeonholed in the Senate Civil Service Committee, has President Roosevelt's approval, Ramspeck said.

When Ramspeck approached the President recently in regard to his stand on the bill, Mr. Roosevelt, according to Ramspeck, replied:

"I am going to stay behind it until it is passed."

McKellar Blamed.

Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, is responsible for the postoffice bill deadlock, Ramspeck stated. McKellar, who is ranking majority member of the Senate Civil Service Committee, is also chairman of the Senate Postoffice Committee.

Ramspeck accused the Senator of tying up ten bills which would better general conditions in the postal service.

Membership in the District Postmaster's League is made up of third and fourth class offices, and many of these have civil service records because of their fourth-class service.

Haines Favor Measures.

Third-class postmasters were urged by W. S. Olexa, third vice president of the league, to seek legislation which would place their group under civil service status. Such sentiment, he said, is looked upon with favor by many members of Congress.

Representative Harry L. Haines (Democrat), Pennslyvania, another speaker, indorsed Ramspeck's views on civil service, although he had "no quarrel with the Senator from Tennessee."

The delegates toured Washington and later in the afternoon visited Arlington National Cemetery.

Harry B. Mitchell, president of the U. S. Civil Service Commission, is scheduled to speak this morning.

Oyster Roast Arranged By D. C. Forty and Eight

An oyster roast and barbecue at 1 p. m. Sunday at the Potomac Boat Club was announced yesterday by the local Grande Voiture of the Forty and Eight, fun society of the American Legion, as the opening event of its fall social season.

Grand Conducteur W. H. Hargrave is chairman of the committee on arrangements. Department Commander Thomas Mason, jr., of the legion, Department President Dorothy B. Harper, of the District of Columbia Legion Auxiliary, and Mrs. Helen McCabe, chapeau departmental of the Eight and Forty, with commanders and chefs de gare in neighboring States, will be guests at the affair.

Shenandoah Park Trip Scheduled for Sunday

The second autumn motor trip and picnic to Shenandoah National Park, Va., with an opportunity to visit the Luray Caverns, will take place Sunday, it was announced yesterday by C. Marshall Finman, superintendent of the National Park Service.

Special buses will leave 1416 F street northwest, near the Willard Hotel, at 8 a. m. Sunday. The park naturalist at three stops along Skyline Drive, between Panorama and Front-Royal, Va., will describe the panorama.

Narcotic Case Suspect Is Arrested in Capital

George W. Landen, 56, 718 Sixth street northwest, was charged with violating the Harrison narcotic act yesterday, following his arrest by Detective Sergt. Charles E. Mansfield.

Mansfield said he seized the man in his rooms on Sixth street and that a small amount of heroin was confiscated. Landen will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage this morning.

Doctor's Auto Looted.

Surgical instruments valued at $300 were stolen from his automobile early yesterday, Dr. Robert M. Bolton, 2700 Thirty-sixth street northwest, reported to police.

U. S. Lending Is Condemned By Bank Body

Competition Is Scored; Speaker Warns of Prospect of 'Dictatorship.'

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Oct. 13.—Twin attacks on the Administration—embracing a protest against the competition of Federal lending agencies and "concern" over President Roosevelt's policies—were launched today at the American Bankers Association convention.

The State Bankers of America, holding their divisional meeting, formally took a stand against "the competition with chartered banks of various Government lending agencies" and indorsed "the principles of the balanced budget."

The action of the State bankers came after Henning W. Prentis, jr., head of a Lancaster, Pa., cork company, struck at the "ways and means and the speed" used in furthering the New Deal toward its declared objectives. He also warned the bankers that a "rigid dictatorship" loomed unless Americans resurvey and relocate the "road ahead."

The bankers chose an opponent of branch banking to head the organization for the next year when they elected Orval W. Adams, Salt Lake City banker, as president.

Philip A. Benson, president and trustee of the Dime Savings Bank, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was chosen first vice president, stepping up from the second vice presidency, which was filled by election of Robert M. Hanes, president of the Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., of Winston-Salem, N. C.

Benson is a Republican. Hanes is a Democrat. Both long have been active in the association's affairs.

In addition to its stand on governmental agencies, the State bank division declared anew its "unalterable opposition" to branch banking across State lines or on a Nation-wide basis. It also expressed opposition to any program that would weaken "our State banking systems or impair the efficiency or authority of our State banking departments."

Playlet Contest Continues Tonight

Three plays will be presented, beginning at 8 o'clock this evening, in the Roosevelt High School auditorium, in the second of the five preliminary contests of the District of Columbia one-act play tournament sponsored by the Community Center Department.

The Players Club of Central Community Center, directed by Yvonne Levy Kushner, will give as the first play, "Atalanta in Wimbledon." The cast includes William A. Davis, Mildred Hope, James Carroll, William Sheaffer, Jack Rollins, Thomas Wyatt and Marians Leigh.

The second play will be George Kelly's "The Weak Spot," presented by the Troupers of East Washington Community Center, directed by Arthur Rhodes. The cast includes Olga Dryden, Carolyn Rogers and William Milton.

The final presentation will be "Smokescreen," by the Wigs and Queues Dramatic Club, directed by Lena G. Parks. The cast comprises June Pyne, Barron Shields and Jack Heather.

Far East Forum Topic.

T. L. Tsui, secretary of the Chinese Embassy, and Fritz Silber, newspaper correspondent who returned recently from Japan, will discuss "Democracy in the Far East" at a meeting of the Capital City Forum tomorrow evening at the Workmen's Circle Lyceum, 1502 Fourteenth street northwest.

Girl Scouts Begin 'Democratic' Plan

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 13 (AP).—A girl scouting program "true to American customs which are democratic" is being launched for the second quarter century of the organization, Mrs. Paul Rittenhouse, of New York, national director, told the National Council convention here today.

Emphasizing the keynote sounded earlier by Mrs. William J. Babington Macaulay, wife of the Irish Free State minister to the Vatican, who urged activities designed to "avoid goose stepping development," Mrs. Rittenhouse opened a general group discussion of a new Girl Scout program which will be limited to homemaking, nature, out of door activities, community service, arts and craft, music, dancing, health and safety.

Grand Master Cromelin Will Address DeMolay

As part of the sesquicentennial celebration of the United States Constitution, Paul Cromelin, grand master of Masons of the District, will address the Order of DeMolay this evening in the new Government auditorium on Constitution avenue, between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets northwest. His subject will be "The Constitution."

Two honorary degrees of the order also will be conferred. A new degree, that of chevalier, designed as a recognition of service to the order, will be conferred upon 17 parsons. The legion of honor for service to the community will be conferred upon seven.

Dembitz Will Speak.

Louis Dembitz will describe some of his experiences on a recent visit to Palestine, at a meeting this evening of the newly formed discussion group of the Washington Zionist district in the board room of the Jewish Community Center. A social hour will follow the lecture.

Shipping Men Urge Drive on Radicals

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 13 (AP).—The Propeller Clubs of the United States demanded in a resolution today immediate Government action in dealing with "radical elements" in the American merchant marine.

The Propeller Clubs took this action as they adjourned their annual convention and marine conference and selected Baltimore as the 1938 meeting site. The delegates re-elected as president C. H. C. Pearsall of New York, president of the Columbian Steamship Co., for a third term.

U. M. W. to Open Meetings.

Local No. 12064, of the United Mine Workers of America, District 50, will meet at 8 p. m. today at the Sons of Jonadab Hall, 623 Indiana avenue. This will be the first in a series of weekly meetings on Thursdays at which special speakers will explain the aims of the C. I. O.

Suspect Guarded In Cafe Slaying

Louis Jack Tapponier, 28-year-old night club attendant, faced a murder charge yestreday after William Harris, 27, former convict, died in Casualty Hospital of gunshot wounds suffered in a cafe brawl on Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Tapponier was confined in Gallinger Hospital under police guard recuperating from injuries suffered in the battle. He suffered a broken nose, cuts and bruises.

James Harris, 29, brother of the dead man, also shot in the fight, was reported slightly improved by hospital physicians. He was wounded in the hip.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald ordered an inquest for today.

Yesterday Detective Sergt. Jeremiah Flaherty questioned several witnesses to the affray which took place at 612 Ninth street northwest.

Program Is Arranged By International Club

A program of poems will be presented at 7:30 p. m. Sunday at the Washington International Club, 1708 New Hampshire avenue northwest, by Miss Dorothy Jackson, of American University.

Miss Monica Kelly, of England, president of the club, has invited all foreign students in Washington to attend this program and also the subsequent affairs of the club. The future program includes teas and dances and a Halloween frolic.

Princeton Club Meets.

The monthly luncheon of the Princeton Club was held yesterday in the Raleigh Hotel. Constantine Brown was the speaker following the luncheon. The next meeting will be held November 13.

World Peace Study By Mrs. Roosevelt Will Appear Jan. 3

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—Mrs. Roosevelt has written a 50-page book called "This Troubled World," which it is understood, presents her ideas and suggestions for world peace.

The book will be published January 3 by H. C. Kinsey & Co. Mrs. Roosevelt, according to George Bye, her literray agent, completed the work on her recent trip to the West Coast.

Mrs. Roosevelt's autobiography, "This Is My Story," will be published by Harper & Bros. in November.

To Discuss Surgery.

—from a choice of 48 natural unposed pictures. That's the story behind the new POLYFOTO
System of Photography
Come in and, perhaps for the first time in your life, get a picture that is really YOU. Why? Because there is no forced posing. You sit, smile, even smoke if you wish. The result is 48 clear pictures of you, just as you are in everyday life.
That's why it's PERFECT for CHILDREN. No posing. No fussing. Think of catching 48 moods of your "pride and joy"... you CAN with polyfoto.
Bring in your children and their pets today. Surprise your friends with a really good portrait of yourself.
